OUR NATIONAL PARKS

The Famous Yellowstone—Its Canyon—Its Geysers and Its Beautiful Scenery

The Yellowstone National Park, which lies principally in Wyoming, is the most widely celebrated of all our national parks because it contains more and greater geysers than all the rest of the world together. The geyser fields next in size are in Iceland and New Zealand. The rest are inconspicuous.

Geysers are, roughly speaking, water volcanoes. They occur only at places where the internal heat of the earth approaches close to the surface. Their action, for so many years unexplained, and even now regarded with wonder by so many is simple. Water from the surface trickling through cracks in the rocks, or water from subterranean springs collecting in the bottom of the geyser's crater, down among the strata of intense heat, becomes itself intensely heated and gives off steam, which expands and forces upward the cooler water that lies above it.

It is then that the water at the surface begins to bubble and give off clouds of steam, the sign to the watchers above that the geyser is about to play.

At last the water in the bottom reaches so great an expansion under continued heat that the less heated water above can no longer weigh it down, so it bursts upward with great violence, rising many feet in the air and continuing to play until practically all the water in the crater has been expelled. The water, cooled and falling back to the ground again seeps through the surface to gather as before in the crater's depth, and in a greater or less time, according to difficulties in the way of its return, becomes reheated to the bursting point, when the geyser spouts again.

One may make a geyser with a test tube and a Bunsen burner.

Nearly the entire Yellowstone region, covering an area of about 3,300 square miles, is remarkable for its hot-water phenomena. The geysers are confined to three basins lying near each other in the middle west side of the park, but other hot water manifestations occur at more widely separated points. Marvelously colored hot springs, mud volcanoes, and other strange phenomena are frequent. At Mammoth, at Norris, and at Thumb the hot water has brought to the surface quantities of white mineral deposits which build terraces of beautifully incrustated basins high up into the air, often engulfing trees of considerable size. Over the edges of these carved basins pours the hot water. Microscopic plants called algae grow on the edges and sides of these basins, assisting the deposition of the mineral matter and painting them hues of red and pink and bluish gray, which in warm weather glow brilliantly, but in cold weather almost disappear. At many other points lesser hot springs occur, introducing strange, almost uncanny, elements into wooded and otherwise quite normal landscapes.

A tour of these hot-water formations and spouting geysers is an experience never to be forgotten. Some of the geysers play at quite regular intervals. For many years the celebrated Old Faithful played with great regularity every seventy minutes, but during the summer of 1915 the interval lengthened to about eighty-five minutes, due, it is supposed, to the smaller snowfall and consequent lessened water supply of the preceding winter. Some of the largest geysers play at irregular intervals of days, weeks, or months. Some very small ones play every few minutes. Many bubbling hot springs, which throw water two or three feet into the air once or twice a minute, are really small, imperfectly formed geysers.

The hot-spring terraces are also rather awe-inspiring spectacle when seen for the first time. The visitor may climb upon them and pick his way around among the steaming pools. In certain lights the surface of these pools appears vividly colored. The deeper hot pools are often intensely green. The incrustations are often beautifully crystallized. Clumps of grass, and even flowers, which have been submerged in the charged waters become exquisitely plated, as if with frosted silver.

But the geysers and hot-water formations are by no means the only wonders in the Yellowstone. Indeed the entire park is a wonderland. The Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone affords a spectacle worthy of a national park were there no geysers. But you must not confuse your Grand Canyons, of which there are several in our wonderful western country. Of these, by far the largest and most impressive is the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, in Arizona. That is the one always meant when people speak of

HEAVY SHOWER

Men Stunned and Houses Struck by Bolts of Lightning

The sharp thunder storm which struck this city on Monday afternoon did considerable damage in a comparatively brief space of time. The residence of Rev. John Goddard on Brookside avenue, Newtonville was struck by lightning, the bolt knocking down part of the chimney and tearing up considerable plastering. Fortunately the family was away so no one was injured.

The garage of Mr. James L. Richards on Kirkstall road, Newtonville, was also hit by lightning, numerous shingles being torn from the roof and sides of the building.

The house of William Green on William street, West Newton, was also struck and a few shingles damaged.

On the Newton golf links, where a number of men were at work, a horse was struck by lightning and instantly killed and Cherrilani Mazola, who was leading the animal across the field and Joseph A. Watts, who was riding on the wagon to which the horse was attached, were stunned. Other workmen summoned the police and the men were taken to the Newton hospital in the police ambulance. Watts recovered in a very short time and was apparently uninjured, but Mazola was unconscious for more than an hour.

A large tree on Washington street, Newton Lower Falls, was struck and split and a part of it fell on the trolley, electric light and telephone wires and the service of each was crippled for a time in this vicinity.

The electric light service was partly interrupted in West Newton, some of the stores and many residences being obliged to use kerosene lamps.

BRAE-BURN CLUB

The house-guests during the summer season at Brae-Burn include Mr. Henry B. Day, Mr. Edward E. Blodgett, Mr. F. W. Batchelder, Mr. Harry L. Burrage, Mr. Wilbur C. Cook of West Newton, Mr. Harry Dana Priest of Auburndale, Mr. William Estabrook Jones of Newton, Mr. Joseph S. Cordingley of Newton Centre, Mr. and Mrs. Russell A. Ballou of Brookline, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pitt of New York. The Engineers Club of Boston will be entertained on Thursday, August 10th at the Club. The program will include golf and tennis.

ORGANIZE NEW CLUB

Residents of Waban at Work on Plans for Neighborhood Club House

Residents of Waban who take a pride in that beautiful village are interested in a plan to erect a Neighborhood Club house, and an active canvass is now under way to raise the necessary funds to make it a financial success.

The idea was first fostered by the Waban Improvement Society, and last March a committee was appointed to take the necessary steps toward the foundation of such a club. How much confidence the committee members have in the plan is indicated by the fact that on learning that a most desirable site was in the market, they promptly purchased it themselves and are holding the land subject to future developments.

For several years the community has felt the need for a neighborhood club and clubhouse that would serve as a social centre and furnish a place for such entertainments as require larger quarters than exist in the village. The proposed new club will be strictly a community or neighborhood affair, and no resident of the district is barred from membership.

The land acquired comprises much of the Willis estate and has an area of 80,000 square feet, with a frontage of 140 feet on Beacon street and 250 feet on Windsor road. The lot has ample room for the clubhouse, with reasonable future development, and for four tennis courts. The clubhouse will face Beacon street and will be a single story affair, sixty-four feet wide and ninety-five feet deep. The main floor will contain an assembly hall with seating room for 400 persons and dancing accommodations for 100 couples. An adequate stage is also provided. Then there will be a reception room and ladies' room, a kitchen, pantry and serving room and a wide screened piazza fronting the west and north.

The basement is to contain four bowling alleys, billiard and pool tables, locker rooms and showers, the heating plant and storage rooms. The construction will be substantial, the architecture attractive and the interior finish inexpensive, but desirable. It is expected that the club will embrace various existing activities, such as the Waban Tennis Courts, Inc., and the Beacon Club.

A membership of 150 families is proposed, a single membership to include all members of a family except grown-up sons. The initiation fee for each membership will be $25, and the annual dues will be $25. There will be (Continued on Page 5.)

COLORS ACCEPTED

Fifth Regiment Are Grateful to Veteran Association for Gift of Flags

Mr. Alvin R. Bailey of this city, secretary of the Fifth Regiment Veteran Association has received two interesting letters which we print below. That from Col. Stover acknowledges the gift of a set of colors recently sent to the active Fifth Regiment by the Veteran Association.

Camp Cotton, El Paso, Texas, July 26, 1916.

Alvin R. Bailey, Secretary,
5th Mass. Regiment Veteran Assn.,
My dear Comrade Bailey:

Today, when the companies of the Fifth returned from fifteen days' duty guarding the border on a front of over one hundred miles, I have, for the first time, unfurled the stand of colors sent to us by the men who stood in our places over fifty years ago.

I have not written before because I wished to tell you how splendid they look as they float in front of my tent within the sound of the bells in Juarez, just across the Rio Grande.

I could have easily drawn a set of colors on requisition, but I wished to have colors with some sentiment behind them. I did not wish to hint for a gift, but when I wrote to Mr. Thompson, I was sure that the colors would come from the grand old boys who carried the same colors so well in the Civil War. We have the colors given us by the Commonwealth, and we have the field colors given us by the senior members of our old regiment; for you are all members of the regiment today just as much as ever. The colors therefore will have a peculiar value in the eyes of our men, and if the opportunity offers, we will make them historic colors.

You will be pleased to learn that our men have made a most favorable impression in the border towns and cities where they have been on duty. The people were sorry to see them march back to camp, and in several cases petitioned the Commanding General to keep them on duty longer. That, of course, was impossible, as the duty was arduous.

For myself, and on behalf of the officers and men of the regiment, I wish to thank the Veteran Association for their splendid and significant gift, and I request you to convey this message to them with our collective and individual hope for the health and long life of the dear old boys of '61.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) Willis W. Stover,
Colonel, 5th Mass. Infantry.

COMPANY C, FIFTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY
MASSACHUSETTS VOLUNTEER MILITIA
Canutillo, Texas,
July 25th, 1916.

Mr. Alvin R. Bailey,
Newton, Mass.

Dear Mr. Bailey:
Your letter received enclosing two clippings which were read with a great deal of interest. In this peculiar war which is not a war the people very often forget that we are doing our duty by standing ready just as much as if we were in the thick of things, which I know you appreciate.

Company C has done very well. We are located in the Lower Mesilla Valley and are very well quartered in school buildings. We have been on guard for two weeks returning to Camp Cotton tomorrow. It has been very peaceful and the men have enjoyed their tour of duty very much.

The Fifth Regiment has sure been a credit to this Commonwealth and in my opinion cannot be beaten by any organization on the border barring the regulars.

Thanking you for your interest, I am,
Sincerely yours,
(Signed) Henry D. Cormerais.

RECRUITING STATION

"The Government has established a Recruiting office for the Massachusetts National Guard regiments now on the Border at the Newton Armory. More men are needed for the 5th, 2nd, 8th and 9th regiments of Infantry, and for the Cavalry, Artillery, and Signal Corps, to fill this State's quota.

The people of Newton are most interested in the Fifth Infantry as the local Company commanded by Capt. Cormerais, is in this regiment. Several hundred men are needed for this Regiment. Capt. Cormerais's company has one of the largest enlistments, but it also is in need of men. The community should take pride in filling its ranks.

The Recruiting Office is in charge of Capt. F. M. Gunby, C. A. C. National Guard of Mass. It will be open in the evening as well as during the day. The Armory is on Washington street, near the West Newton station."

EDITORIAL

The request of the school committee that the aldermen authorize $500 for plans for proposed enlargement of the Newton High Schools will probably bring to a head the suggestion that a new high school be erected on the south side of the city, instead of centralizing high school work at one place in Newtonville. The matter is one which ought to be given careful study, not only for the future growth of the city but as affected by the rapid increase in high school attendance.

The new club house planned for the beautiful village of Waban will not only be an addition to the social life of that community but it will be a valuable asset in the way of increasing real estate values. Desirable residents will be attracted by the feature of a Neighborhood Club of this kind and it should prove to be a potent factor in the rapid development of that village.

NEWTON BOAT CLUB

The second moving picture show of the season was given from the piazza of the Newton Boat Club to the canoeists on the river on Saturday evening, July 29. The weather was ideal and the cool evening breeze kept the mosquitoes away from the canoeists. A double reel film of Charlie Chaplin was shown, which greatly amused, as well as other comedy features. The most interesting film, which was greatly appreciated by the canoeists, was the reproduction of the 13th Annual Regatta of the Waltham Canoe Club on the screen. These pictures were taken at Waltham and were shown at Keith's in Boston last year. Through the courtesies of Dadmun Company the entertainment committee was able to show these films.

Instead of the usual orchestra, several of the club members volunteered to "play the pictures" on the piano, which was right near the screen. The construction work on the Boston & Albany bridge is progressing very slowly because of the difficulties which the workers have encountered. The contracting company have their boilers across the river from the clubhouse and as a result everything is covered with soot, ashes and dust. However, when the job is completed, the canoeists may pass under the railroad bridge without fear of having hot ashes dropped upon them, for a 75-foot concrete arch will protect them.

POLICE NOTES

Thomas J. Samoht, a messenger boy from New Haven, Conn., appeared in the Newton Police Court Saturday morning on a charge of being a vagrant. Samoht was picked up Friday evening by patrolman Meehan, and in court Friday told a long story of his wanderings all over the country. He said that he had just now come from Florida and had made his way partly by selling pencils and partly by walking and stealing rides. The case was continued until Aug. 7 on condition that he stay out of Newton.

A resident of Needham rode his bicycle over into Newton one evening a short time ago, and as he did not have a light on it, he was summoned into court Saturday morning. He pleaded not guilty, but the judge viewed the matter in another way and fined him $5, which he paid.

Two runaway boys from Worcester, William Brick, 14, and Alfred Truendall, 14, both living at 108 Washington street, that city, were picked up by patrolman Thomas Dolan Friday evening in Auburndale and were sent back to the Worcester police early Saturday morning.

Hyman Rosmann of Cambridge was in court Thursday morning on a complaint sworn out by patrolman M. J. Neagle. Rosmann was charged with collecting junk without a license. He testified that he was employed by a company and visited only houses which another employee had visited several days before and made arrangements for the disposal of the junk. Judge Kennedy imposed a fine of $10, which was appealed.

Michael Walsh, no home, was arrested early Wednesday morning by patrolman Crowley, charged with the larceny of a quart of milk from a house on Boylston street, Newton Highlands. Before Judge Kennedy Walsh was given a sentence of 20 days in the House of Correction.

BRAVES FIELD CONCERT

Vying in popularity with the fireworks displays at Braves Field are the popular-priced band concerts being held at "the home of big things," these band concerts alternating with the pyrotechnic exhibitions. The next of the concerts comes next Wednesday evening when the famous First Corp Cadets band, augmented to a roster of 75 musicians, will furnish a two and one-half hour concert program, under the leadership of J. B. Fielding. The concert is popular in price as well as in music, the grandstand seats being 25 cents while admission to the big pavilions is only 15 cents.

In addition to the First Corps Cadet Band, Mme. Grace Hamlin, who made so large a hit at the concert last week, has been re-engaged and will sing favorites such as "Somewhere a Voice is Calling," "Kiss me Again," "Fetizi Scheff's great hit, and "A Little Bit of Heaven." Then a dozen troubadours will contribute additional life to the program in some of the present-day successes.

DEATH OF FORMER RESIDENT

Mr. J. Duncan Edmonds, a son of the late Hon. J. Wiley Edmonds, died last night at his home in Groton after an illness of several months. Mr. Edmonds was born in Newton 69 years ago and made this city his home until he went to Groton about five years ago. He is unmarried and was the last of the male branch of the family. Arrangements for the funeral are not yet completed but they will probably be held Sunday afternoon at Mt. Auburn chapel.

LETTER FROM THE BORDER

The following letter has been received from a Newton lad now with his regiment at El Paso, Texas,—

El Paso, Texas, July 27, 1916.
To the Newton Graphic:—
The Mexicans in El Paso are rather quiet but fight a great deal among themselves. Their adobe houses are more comfortable than any other kind I know of as they are nice and cool in the hot weather, and warm in the cool weather.

When General Villa was in power he protected the Americans or gringos, as we are called, rather than persecuting them until the U. S. recognized Carranza which made him angry. Most people think that the Mexicans are excellent marksmen, but as an example there was a 3-hour battle in Chahawah and when the smoke cleared all the dead found was a burro and several people wounded. But at the same time there are a great many good shots among them many being deserters from the U. S. Army and soldiers of fortune.

El Paso is a scene of activity on account of so many troops moving in and out so much. Most every street has an army truck, armored truck or mounted patrols also a pro guard. Many of the soldiers from different regiments and battalions complain as to the food but that is the fault of the mess sergeants on whom all the responsibility falls; the Mass. Signal Troops being always well fed, etc. The Mass. Signal Troops have the best, cleanest and picturesque camp in El Paso and people come from all directions to see it.

Among the Newton boys in the Signal Corps are Jack Cotton, William Turnbull, Alfred W. Young (Cy), and John Simpson, all of whom are in good health and all tanned up. The sandstorms here are the only troublesome thing, as they generally tear up a tent or tear away one's love letters. Some little excitement occurred when one of the guards of the Mass. Hospital Corps was shot at and every camp turned out their guards and a great deal of shooting took place.

Prices are rather high but we don't think of them now as we are getting used to it. Most northern people seem to have the impression that El Paso is a little city with adobe houses but I can't say as I have seen a more beautiful place and the streets beat any I have ever seen in U. S., as they are all even and well kept. The city in itself has large concrete buildings and fine parks. It is rather out of the ordinary as El Paso is in the midst of a large desert and it makes water high, also lawns expensive to keep.

JOHN SIMPSON.

NORTH SHORE ROUTE

"On to Gloucester!" is a familiar sound at this time of year, and the famous fishing port is as attractive as ever. The sail down the harbor and along the north shore is delightful, and the trip is an easy and enjoyable one-day event. The steel steamers "Cape Ann" and "City of Gloucester" leave Central wharf, at the foot of State street, Boston, at 10 A. M. and 2 P. M.; Sundays and holidays at 10:15 A. M. Leave Gloucester week days at 2:15 P. M.; Sundays and holidays at 3:15 P. M. The Atlantic avenue elevated and tunnel stations are opposite Central wharf.

POLITICAL NOTES

Representative James E. MacPherson of Framingham is making rapid strides in his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Senator of this district. Both Ex-Representative Wilbur A. Wood of Hopkinton and Ex-Representative Aaron C. Dowse of Sherborn, who were widely spoken of as candidates and have a strong following in the western end of the district, have withdrawn in favor of Mr. MacPherson. Senator Hobbs, Chairman of the Committee on redistricting has written Mr. MacPherson a letter expressing appreciation of his efforts so largely responsible for the defeat of the plan to link Newton and Brighton in a Senatorial district, and trusting that his candidacy will result successfully, and Newton will appreciate Mr. MacPherson's services in this connection as well as in other matters.

In making its decennial apportionment of Representative districts, the Middlesex County Commissioners have made no change so far as it affects this city, Newton continuing as the Fourth district, with three representatives.

Friends of Senator N. A. Tufts of Waltham who is a candidate for district attorney for Middlesex county have made such an excellent fight in his interests that the other candidates will have to work very hard to overcome the lead Mr. Tufts has already obtained.

TO RELIEVE SOLDIERS

To the Citizens of Newton:
In response to President Wilson's call for troops, C. Company of Newton has started for the front. In order to meet any needs of the families of the men who have enlisted, the NEWTON SOLDIERS' RELIEF COMMITTEE has been organized, consisting of the following:

Use of Worry.

Competent physicians are said to be agreed that most of the dyspepsia so prevalent today is due to nothing but worry. As in other cases, "competent physicians" confuse the cause with the effect. Dyspepsia is not due to worry, but worry is due to dyspepsia. Chronic dyspepsia worries while no person will worry who has sound digestion and a clean colon.

WARNING to Motorists

The Standard Oil Company of New York produces only one regular grade of gasoline for motor cars—SOCONY Motor Gasoline.

Some dealers and garage men are selling poor blends and worthless mixtures under misleading names, trying to make the motorist believe he is getting our well-known product.

Do not let them deceive you. If you want the genuine, reliable SOCONY Gasoline, look for the RED, WHITE and BLUE SOCONY sign on service stations and garages.

This sign is the guarantee of quality, purity and reliability. It insures maximum power and miles per gallon, clean burning, and freedom from carbon troubles.

Ask for SOCONY gasoline by name and buy only where you see the RED, WHITE and BLUE SOCONY sign.

DONATION DAY

Friday, August 11th, will be Visiting and Donation Day at the Gov. John A. Andrew Home, 92 Washington park, Newtonville.

This Home is for Civil War Veterans and their wives and widows. A cordial invitation is extended to the citizens of Newton and vicinity to call. The co-operation of the charitably disposed is earnestly solicited.

a small charge for bowling, billiards and tennis and additional income will be derived from the renting of the hall for private entertainments. In making plans the committee has studied the budgets of other clubs and has figured operating cost so that, based on their figures, the income will give service the year round.

The total cost of the plant, including land, buildings, furnishings and all other items, will not exceed $30,000. It is proposed to raise approximately $15,000 by mortgages. The balance of the cost is to be raised by the issuance of debenture bonds, each in the amount of $100, bearing interest at five per cent, and to be purchased by club members. The plans call for each member to purchase one of these bonds. Entrance fees paid by those who join the club after its original financing will be set apart for the retirement of these bonds. Also, it is proposed that the initiation fee of $25 be not required from charter members who purchase bonds.

In order to proceed with the preliminary plans, such as signing contracts, the committee formed a club corporation and chose officers. Before the club is ready for occupancy, these officers will resign, at a meeting of the entire club, so that the members may effect whatever organization they desire. It is planned to have construction start by the middle of August.

The following-named comprise the committee, with the offices they now hold: president, Donald M. Hill; treasurer, Willis R. Fisher; clerk, Lawrence Allen; directors, Charles A. Andrews, Joseph W. Bartlett, Charles C. Blaney and J. Earle Parker.

ELECTRIC COOKING IS CHEAP AND SIMPLE

Some people still have a notion that it is expensive to use an electric range and do all their cooking with electricity. More than a thousand families in the territory served by the Boston Edison Company do not find it so. Records of cost show that it averages about 75c per person per month—even in families where all the cooking is done by servants.

In one family of five persons, in Greater Boston, four of whom, including the maid, had three meals a day at home (and entertained guests several times) the cost for electricity for all the cooking averaged about 60c per person per month for the first two months the family had the electric range.

These figures, of course, do not include any charges for the guests entertained during that time. So much for the economy of electric cooking.

Some housekeepers still have a notion that it is hard to learn to cook on an electric range. The best answer to this is that a thousand and more housekeepers in Greater Boston who are using electric ranges have not found it so.

Servants take to electric ranges like ducks to water. You do things on an electric range just the same as on any other range, only better and easier. You get heat on the electric range by simply turning a switch. Each switch is marked for high, medium or low heat, and you regulate your heat the same as you do on any other range, only the regulation is much more perfect, and more easily controlled.

Electric ranges are built in all sorts of styles and shapes nowadays to fit every size and shape of kitchen; all sizes of families.

During the month of August the Boston Edison Company is having a special sale of a new electric range called the Thermax. This is a portable range that is light enough to be lifted around by hand from a table to some out of the way place in the pantry when not in use, or even lifted off from the table and set down on the floor underneath completely out of the way. It has two heating units with complete regulation for the high medium and low, and for a family of two, three, or even four, it will do all the cooking and baking. This range regularly sells for $20, but, during the month of August only, this range will be sold at $15, $3 down and $2 a month, for six months, without any interest charges whatever. The person who buys on the easy-payment plan will get the range just as cheaply as the person who pays cash.

For these ranges a special wiring circuit which, by the way, is inexpensive, is required. This is put in so that the housekeeper can have the advantage of the low cooking rate of a tripe over two cents per kilowatt hour. The extra wiring will also be furnished the housekeeper on the easy-payment plan.

One often hears the expression "Housekeepers should not let habit interfere with improving their methods." This applies particularly to electric cooking. It is up to date, simple, inexpensive way, and every one should know about it.

In each Edison Light Store during August a special demonstration of this new long-priced electric range will be going on.

DEATH OF MR. NASH

Mr. George M. Nash died last Friday at his home on Fairmont avenue, Newton, following a stroke of apoplexy the previous Tuesday, altho his health up to that time had been excellent.

He was born in Abington, Oct. 3, 1854, and graduated from Harvard College in 1877. For a few years he taught school in Cleveland, Ohio.

On returning to Boston, he entered business with the Lamb & Ritchie Company, in Cambridgeport, remaining with them up to about three years ago, when he left there. About a year afterward he started in business for himself, together with his old partner, Mr. Lamb, under the style of Lamb & Nash Company for the manufacture of sheet metal goods and also for making sheet metal machinery.

Mr. Nash was interested in golf and he was long a most enthusiastic player and a member of several golf clubs. He was one of the "old guard" of golfers, who hold an annual reunion in Wollaston, and was always on hand for these gatherings. He belonged to the golf club there, among his other associations. He was a member of the Harvard Club of Boston and also that in New York.

He was deeply interested in the Channing Church, served on its Standing Committee, and had also served as president of the Unitarian Club of Newton.

Mr. Nash married Miss Emma F. Kimball of Abington, and is survived by her, three sons and one daughter. Mr. Russell K. Nash who was in business with his father, Mr. Henry L. Nash, who just graduated from Harvard College and who is now on his way to India to work for the Y. M. C. A. Paul F. Nash who is attending the Boys' Training Camp at Fort Terry, Long Island, and Miss Margaret Nash, a student at Vassar.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at his late home on Fairmont avenue, Rev. R. Perry Bush of Chelsea officiating, and the interment was at the Newton Cemetery.

THE MODERN MOTORIST'S FREEDOM

With more than three million cars in use in the country, as there will be before the summer ends, and allowing the minimum of three passengers per vehicle, nearly a tenth of our total population will be motoring during 1916. This is undoubtedly a record in wholesale public amusement. One of the chief charms of this automobile touring is the relief from responsibility that it brings. Time and space have relaxed their hold on the man in the car, if they have not entirely released him. The limitations of the time-table are not for him. He may come and go, subject only to the dictates of his own fancy. It is travel under conditions of freedom that have never before been approached.—Alexander Johnston in The Country-side Magazine for August.

FOR RHUBARB PIES

RECIPES THAT HAVE BEEN TRIED
AND NOT FOUND WANTING.Fine Served With a Form of Mincemeat—Mixed With Raisins—Two Kinds of Rhubarb Meringue Are Recommended.

Mince Rhubarb Pie.—One cupful of rhubarb, after chopping fine, one-half cupful sugar, one-half cupful best molasses, one-half cupful water, one-half cupful raisins chopped, one and a half crackers, rolled, one egg, one-half teaspoonful cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoonful cloves, a little nutmeg, a little salt and one tablespoonful butter.
Bake with two crusts. This makes two pies.

Mock Lemon Pie.—One cupful rhubarb sauce, three-fourths cupful sugar, yolks of two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of sweet cream. Flavor with lemon extract, bake in one crust and frost with whites of two eggs and two tablespoonfuls of sugar.

Rhubarb and Raisin Pie.—Two cupfuls of rhubarb and one cupful of raisins, chopped together quite fine, one cupful sugar, one teaspoonful cinnamon, a little salt and bits of butter.
Bake in two crusts.

Delicious Rhubarb Pie.—Line a deep pie plate with crust and cut fine enough rhubarb to nearly fill the plate, and put it in a saucepan. Mix one-half teaspoonful cornstarch with a little cold water and stir into one-half cupful boiling water, pour over rhubarb, add a small handful of seedless raisins and at least one and a half cupfuls of sugar (the amount depends upon the acidity of the rhubarb); beat all together, but do not boil. Bake with two crusts.

Rhubarb Meringue Pie.—Beat the yolks of two eggs, add one tablespoonful cornstarch, one cupful of sugar and one cupful of finely-chopped rhubarb;
turn into pie plate lined with rich crust and bake; when done cool slightly, then frost with the two whites beaten stiff, three tablespoonfuls sugar and one teaspoonful of lemon extract.
Brown lightly in the oven.

Rhubarb Meringue Pie No. 2.—To one cupful of finely-chopped rhubarb add one cupful of sugar and the grated rind of one lemon, put one teaspoonful of cornstarch in a cup, moisten with a little cold water, then fill the cup with boiling water and add to it the rhubarb, then add the beaten yolks of three eggs. Bake with one crust and when cold cover with meringues of the whites of the three eggs and three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and brown lightly.

Artichokes.

Artichoke is a coming vegetable.
The French have shown us its utility.

The plant grows wild in southern Europe.

The artichoke is a graceful plant,
several feet high.

Its handsome leaves and fine appearance recommend it for ornamental use.

The artichoke belongs to the same family as the daisy and the sunflower.

The part which is eaten is the flat, circular disk which bears the flowers.

The tender base of the disk is also eaten after the heads are boiled tender.

Dressed with oil and vinegar, the tender parts of boiled artichoke make a good salad.

Finnan Haddie.

Place fish, skin side down, in a baking pan with water enough to cover.
Boil ten minutes, when skin may be easily removed. Cut off the tail well into the meat. Return to pan, using half milk and half cream instead of water. Thick slices of boiled potato should be placed snugly around the fish. Season in the pan if desired.

The unserved fish may be separated from the bones, mixed with cream or milk and cracker crumbs, well seasoned and baked. This makes a delicious lunch or side serving.

Bag of Lettuce.

To place lettuce or parsley of celery in a cloth bag and keep directly on the ice means that the vegetable will keep fresh and crisp much longer than in any other way. Bags, all made and stamped with the name "Lettuce,"
"Parsley" or "Celery" may be had for 35 cents. There is a shir string at top to pull tight and keep the contents in place. It would possibly take about an hour to make one of these bags, but the comfort and satisfaction in using one cannot be computed.

Scrambled Rice and Bacon.

Three cupfuls cooked rice, 12 slices of bacon, three eggs, beaten, salt and pepper.

Fry or bake the bacon till crisp;
pour off half the fat and put the bacon aside in a warm place. Mix together the eggs and rice and add salt and pepper as needed. Pour into the hot bacon fat left in the frying pan and scramble. Heap in a mound on a hot platter and surround with the bacon —Good Housekeeping.

Oxford Salad.

Small leaves of lettuce, three to each guest. On each slice of orange place a strip of canned red sweet pepper. Over all pour a dressing made of the juice from ends of oranges, a little of the pepper liquor and plenty of salt.
Very pretty, and so good.

To Dry Cut Glass.

Dry cut glass with soft tissue paper
if you want it to be brilliant.

REQUIRES CARE IN MAKING

Tea, to Be at Its Best, Must Be Prepared Under Exactly the Proper Conditions.

There is practically no nutriment in tea, though there are small amounts of mineral salts. The principal ingredients are caffeine, which stimulates the nerves; volatile oils, which give the flavor, and tannic acid, which retards the digestion.

The Japanese have made a religious and aesthetic ceremonial of tea-drinking, and, like the mineral waters whose efficiency is found to depend largely on the change and rest accompanying their drinking, the afternoon tea has its psychological as well as its physiological reasons for the pleasant results produced.

Like all beverages which refresh by stimulating, tea should be used with great discretion.

Less tea is used to the cup than in the case of coffee—one-half to one teaspoonful as compared to one tablespoonful. A mild cup of tea well made will not hurt a healthy person, and, although the stimulating principle is the same, tea does not seem to have so direct or so pronounced an effect on the central nervous system as does coffee.
Children, people with gastric troubles or those who are nervous should not drink tea.

Green tea contains much more tan-nic acid than black tea. Be sure it does not boil or stand on the leaves if you use it.

Hard or stale water does not make good tea. It should be freshly drawn and freshly boiled.

Boiling any tea is a crime. The caffein is readily soluble and is quickly obtained in solution. Boiling or long standing on the leaves only results in more of the injurious tannic acid being extracted and spoils the flavor as well as making the beverage more harmful.

COVERS FOR SWEEPING DAYS

Provision May Be Made That Will Do Away With Much Annoyance on Those Occasions.

To find the necessary coverings on sweeping days has often sent the maid scurrying about for old aprons, sheets, towels and anything else she could lay her hands on to use for this purpose.

A friend of mine has solved the difficulty in this way: She purchased a quantity of gray cambric and made from it a large sheet with which to cover the beds and sideboard; smaller covers for dressers and toilet tables were made and still others, in suitable shapes, were designed to put over the lamps, mantels and the like. She also made from the cambric a bag to keep the covers in; this was hung in the broom closet.

While light, the cambric formed a perfect protection against dust, and a simple shaking when the sweeping was finished freed the covers from the dust that had settled upon them, so that they required washing but once a month. The use of these dust covers saved much valuable time and extra work. The cost of a set is moderate and it does not take long to make them.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Omelet of Peas.

Beat up three eggs, to which add one tablespoonful of grated cheese;
pepper and salt and mix thoroughly.
Butter an omelette pan and pour in the mixture; keep moving it gently with a fork, while you sprinkle in with the other hand some cooked green peas or canned. The omelet will be cooked by the time you have sprinkled in two handfuls. Slip it off on a very hot dish, fold over and serve at once.

Queen Cake.

Three eggs, two cupfuls sugar, large half cupful butter, one cupful milk, one teaspoonful soda, two teaspoonfuls cream of tartar, three cupfuls flour.
Flavor to taste. This makes two quite good-sized loaves or a large sheet. It can be divided and put three whites in one loaf and three yolks in the other. Then use one and a half cupfuls of flour to each loaf and halve everything else in proportion.

Cream of Rice Soup.

Two quarts of chicken broth, one teaspoonful of rice, one quart of milk (half cream is better), one onion, one stalk of celery, salt and pepper to taste. Wash the rice, add the onion and celery and cook two hours; then strain through a sieve. Add the seasoning and the milk or cream, which has come to the boiling point. If milk is used, add a little piece of butter.

Egg Sauce.

This is excellent with almost any poiled fish. Have ready two hard-boiled eggs, cut in small pieces. Use two tablespoonfuls of white roux, or melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and add one of flour to it, then a cupful of boiling water and cook for at least ten minutes. Add the egg, seasoning, more butter, and, if liked, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley.

Beef a La Mode.

Three pounds round steak chopped fine, two well-beaten eggs, four soda crackers rolled fine, one teaspoonful salt and one teaspoonful sage, one-half teaspoonful pepper, two tablespoonfuls milk. Roll into a loaf, mixing well, and bake two hours.

Chicken and Macaroni.

Take equal parts of cold chicken, boiled macaroni and tomato sauce. Put in layers in a shallow dish and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake until brown.

HIGGINS—BROWN

Miss Grace Adella Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Edwin Brown and Mr. Willard Elliot Higgins, son of Mr. Willard S. Higgins were united in marriage on Saturday evening,
July 29th at Newtonville.

The bride's residence on Lowell avenue was decorated for the occasion with palms and cut flowers. The bridal couple stood in a floral bower arranged in the parlor, and the ceremony was performed at seven o'clock by Rev. Rufus H. Dix, pastor of the First Universalist Church. The bride was attractively attired in a beautiful wedding gown of white embroidered voile with lace trimmings. There were no attendants.

Immediately following the ceremony an informal reception was held, after which Mr. and Mrs. Higgins left on a wedding trip, and on their return will reside at 44 Walker street, Newton-ville.

About twenty-five guests including members of the immediate families were present from Wellesley, Uxbridge, Natick, Boston, and the Newtons.

The bride is a graduate of Smith College class of '05, and has held a position in the office of the City Treasurer at City Hall, West Newton for the past ten years. She is a popular member of the society of the First Universalist Church and a member of the Lend-A-Hand Society.

Mr. Higgins is a graduate of the Newton High School and is associated in business with his father in the firm of Higgins and Nickerson, builders and contractors.

Whence the Modern "Bridal."

Bridal, as meaning a feast to celebrate a wedding is really bride ale, ale being the term formerly used to indicate any festival in England.

CONCERTS AT NORUMBEGA

All that is best in classical and popular music will be included in the programs which Whitcomb's Concert Band will present twice daily at Norumbega next week. The organization includes forty-five leading musicians from all parts of the country and the concerts are looked on as the entertainment feature of the season.
 The band will be assisted by Miss Louise Reynolds, prima donna soprano and by Mr. John Thomas, humorist of note. For this engagement the starting hour of the performances has been slightly changed so that the afternoon concerts will start at 3.15 o'clock and the evening performances at 8.
 Manager Alberte has prepared several novel surprises in connection with the concerts, including something new in the way of a patriotic finale. There will be the usual sacred concert on Sunday night with a multi-reel pictures, "The Marriage of Kitty," as a feature.

Four Thousand Languages.

Most people are so sparing of the use of languages other than their own that they have little idea that there are more than 4,000 languages in the world. There are six languages common in Austria-Hungary, and Emperor Franz Josef is master of them all. It is said that there are 60 vocabularies in Brazil. In Mexico the Nahuatl is spoken in 700 dialects. There are hundreds in Borneo, while in Australia there is no classifying the complexities. According to the latest statistics, English is at present spoken by 130,000,000, German by 100,000,000, Russian by 70,000,000, French by 40,000,000 and Italian by 30,000,000. Spanish is spoken by 40,000,000, and is constantly on the increase, owing to the increase in commerce in Spain.

PRIZES WORTH STRIVING FOR

Nearly everybody, old or young, likes puzzles or trials of skill, particularly where the guessing of the subject of the picture is concerned. When this fascinating pastime is coupled with the fact that your efforts may win for you a free automobile, a travel trip or a substantial sum of Uncle Sam's best currency the sport becomes doubly fascinating.
 Such an offer is embraced in the Neighborhood Auto Contest now in progress at Norumbega Park. Though this great project is now at its height the fact that the management has provided copies, in postcard form, of all views that have already been shown so that anyone who, so far, has failed to enter the contest has an equal chance, by studying the views at home.
 The current series of views, being shown on the screen in the theatre, are marvels of photographic art and the clearness of their detail will be an aid to contestants in locating the subjects.

Resurrecting a Dead Battery.

A clock having an electric contact stopped with the contact closed, so that when it was started up a couple of hours later, the battery was so far polarized that it could not operate the magnet to which it was connected. To wait till the battery could recuperate would mean leaving the mechanism out of use for some hours. The battery consisted of three Leclanche cells. Five dry cells were brought in to use. Connected in series, the terminal wires were touched to the terminals of the exhausted battery, zinc to zinc and carbon to carbon. After 30 seconds of this reverse current the battery was fully restored and ready for business.

OUR NATIONAL PARKS

The Curious Formation of the Glacier National Park and Some of Its Wonders

The Glacier National Park is so named because in the hollow of its rugged mountain tops lie more than sixty glaciers. It is in northwestern Montana right up against the Canadian boundary line, from which, on the map, it appears to hang down like a boy's pocket full of the sort of things boys usually carry there. It is a land of peaks and precipices, snow, ice, rushing rivers, waterfalls, and lakes of great loveliness. Experienced travelers tell us that nowhere in the world is alpine beauty found in such diversity and luxuriance. It contains 1,534 square miles.

A glacier is a river of ice, remarkably like a river of water in its action, only of course, much slower. The glacier begins in a pocket or cirque of snow instead of in a lake or spring, as does a river.

Like the river, it flows through valleys, the ice becoming harder under the pressure from above. It grows in size by smaller glaciers flowing into it. It breaks into ripples of ice while flowing over rocky ledges, and, also like rivers, forms falls when dropping over precipices.

The glacier ends when it reaches far enough down the mountain sides for the warmer weather to melt the ice into a river of water.

But, with all its glaciers, the Glacier National Park is chiefly remarkable for its picturesquely modeled peaks, the unique quality of its rugged mountain masses, its gigantic precipices, and the romantic loveliness of its lakes. Though all the other National Parks have these general features in addition to others which differentiate each from the other, the Glacier National Park possesses them in unusual abundance and especially happy combination. In fact the almost sensational massing of the scenic features is what gives it marked individuality.

How Nature made this remarkable spot far back in the dim ages long before man is a stirring story.

Once this whole region was covered with water, but whether the water was a lake or a part of the sea no man knows. The tiny earthy particles carried in this water, just as you see mud carried in a stream after a shower, deposited themselves gradually in layers on the bottom, continually lessening the water's depth. Geologists call these layers strata after they harden into rock.

SAVES DROWNING MAN

Mr. Edward H. Ruby of Newton Highlands Rescues Man at Monument Beach

Friends of Mr. Edward H. Ruby of Newton Highlands are congratulating him for the courage and skill which he displayed in rescuing a drowning man in the waters of Buzzards Bay last week.

Mr. George Slosson, a New York millionaire, who was visiting at the summer estate of Mr. Philip Nichols of Newton, was swimming off the Nichols property at Monument Beach, when he became exhausted and confused and called wildly for help. Mr. Ruby, who was near by and who is an expert swimmer, hearing his cries at once dove off the dock and swam to his assistance. Ruby reached Slosson as the latter was going down for the third time and held him up while Slosson, who is a large, powerful man, struggled violently in his confusion. Both would probably have been drowned if Mr. Nichols himself had not come upon the scene at an opportune moment with a boat and pulled the struggling pair ashore.

FOR THE SENATORSHIP

Ex-Representative Naphen is quietly pushing his canvas for the Senatorship and enlisted the support of many of the leading Republicans of the District and at the final showdown will give a good account of himself.

His opponents seem to be the Framingham faction who are supporting Ex-Representative McPherson and Dr. Eros Bigelow who are striving for the honor.

Candidate Naphen has the entire support of Natick Republicans who believe he has the calibre for the position. From a life long acquaintance with Ex-Representative Naphen we can say that he is in every way qualified to make a good record in the upper branch of the legislature. He stands squarely upon the Republican platform. He cannot be induced to favor any measure in which he does not believe is for the best interest of the district.

He is aggressive and will back up his opinions on every possible occasion.

He can be relied upon where honesty, sobriety and fair dealings are considerations and Republicans will make no mistake in the support of Naphen for Senator.—Natick Bulletin.

At the Show Rooms of McKenney & Waterbury Co., Franklin St., corner Congress, there is on exhibition the grandest display of Electric and Gas Lighting Fixtures, shown in parlors, all lighted to give desired effect to meet any requirements for homes and public buildings.

HELP TAX RATE

Aldermen Add $18,000 to Revenue and Reduce Tax Levy to That Amount

The mid summer meeting of the board of aldermen was very well attended, only four of the twenty-one members being absent. President Blanchard was in the chair and Aldermen Forknall, Murphy, Malcolm, Alley, McCarthy, Winslow, Early, Hollis, Angier, Cobb, Allen, Clark, Clement, Harriman, Kendrick and Bentley were present.

Hearings were held on pole locations on Judkins and Jenison streets and strong protests were made by Messrs. W. H. Zoller, A. D. Auryansen and William Hickox, and a letter in opposition was read from Mr. Levi Cooley. Mr. R. E. Gould appeared for the Company. No one appeared at a hearing on poles on Dorset road or on the taking of land for sewer in Tyler terrace, altho a written objection was filed on the latter by Frederick H. Jackson.

On recommendation of the Mayor, grants were made for work by the Forestry and Buildings departments, and $200 added to the Sewer Unclassified account.

Permits to use private garages were granted to Mabel M. Hardy, Sylvan avenue, Manooz Kardashian, Hillside road, W. M. Whitman, Neholden road, Mrs. Mabel E. Goode, 930 Centre street, John B. Mactagart, Hammond street, W. J. Dimock, Pine Ridge road, A. Terkelsen, Bradford road, E. W. E. Kilpatrick, Wolcott street, E. W. Paine, Sumner street, T. C. Davis, Oak terrace, A. F. Brewer, 521 Commonwealth avenue, Thos. Lally, P. C. Cotter, Fuller street, and J. T. Dickenson, Chestnut street. Transfer of pool table licenses were granted the Newton Catholic Union at 263 Church street and to Louis Di Russo on Commonwealth avenue.

A hearing on Sept. 11 was assigned on petition for sewer in Grant street and petitions were received for sewer in Underwood avenue and Derby terrace, in Brewster road, in South street, and in Playstead road and Ricker road. After a recess for committee meetings, orders were passed for pole locations in Dorset road, taking land and for sewer construction in Tyler terrace, for sewer in Ricker road, and ratifying action taken July 26 on order for $6000 for drainage of South Meadow brook.

An order to transfer $15,000 from the Excess and Deficiency account to 1916 revenue, to help out the tax levy, was reported by the Finance Committee on the Mayor's recommendation to transfer $35,000 for that purpose. Alderman Early called attention to the fact that the tax rate was usually fixed in multiples of ten cents and suggested an amendment to $18,000, which was adopted.

The board adjourned at 9.48 o'clock.

Fire Prevention Work on School Houses Responsible for Highest Rate in History of the City

Following the meeting of the aldermen on Monday night, at which $18,000 was transferred from the Excess and Deficiency account to the revenue for 1916, the assessors on Tuesday morning announced the tax rate for the year as $18.90, an increase of forty cents over the $18.50 rate of last year. These figures carry out the predictions made recently in our editorial column, that the increased city expenses of considerably over a hundred thousand dollars would inevitably cause an increase in the rate. The Assessors were fortunate in finding over three millions of new real and personal property, or the rate would have been much higher. The increase in the rate is largely due to increased appropriations for city expenses, the cost of fire prevention work alone exceeding fifty thousand dollars, adding nearly sixty cents to the rate.

The rate of $18.90 is the highest the city has ever known, the rate of $18.80 in 1914 having been the highest until this year. The average tax rate for the past ten years has been $17.23 and for the preceding ten years $16.54.

Attention is invited to the large increase in the value of buildings, nearly two millions of the total increase being on this one item and shows how rapidly the city is growing. The decrease in the estimate of receipts is in regard to disposition of corporation taxes, where about $12,000 will be diverted from the city to the state treasury.

The following figures will give some interesting comparisons:—

	1916	1915
City Budget and Additional Appropriations	$1,646,497.92	$1,516,884.66
State, Metropolitan, etc., Taxes	252,695.93	295,675.40

DR. PRINCE DEAD

Mr. John Tilden Prince, Ph. D., for many years one of the best-known and most active educators of Massachusetts and resident of this city for 26 years, died on Friday at his home, 15 Temple street, West Newton. He had been incapacitated for a long time, the sedentary life which he followed having caused a disability which became increasingly worse.

Mr. Prince was born on Dec. 30, 1844, in Kingston. His earlier education was received there as well as at Pierce Academy in Middleboro, and the Bridgewater State Normal School, from which he was graduated in 1863. He went then to Harvard and finally to Leipzig University, Germany, where he obtained his doctor's degree. His thesis was "Courses of Studies and Methods of Teaching."

Mr. Prince had been engaged in educational work in various places, including Middleboro, Mattapoisett, Watertown, Waltham and St. Louis, Mo. In 1882, he became agent of the Massachusetts State Board of Education, and while serving on the board was an instructor at Wellesley, principal of the Massachusetts State Normal School at Salem and lecturer in the Harvard Summer School and in the Burlington, Vt., Summer School.

Besides contributing articles on pedagogy to various publications, he wrote, among other things, "The Schools of Germany," "A Teacher's Manual," "School Organization," "A Practical English Grammar," and a series of arithmetics, including eight books for pupils. He had a profound knowledge of educational theory and his reputation was not confined to Massachusetts.

He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Lucinda W. Prince, whose work in connection with the Women's Educational and Industrial Union has won her national recognition.

The funeral services were held at the Church of the New Jerusalem at Newtonville, on Sunday afternoon, Rev. John Goddard, the pastor, officiating and the interment was at the Old Cemetery at Kingston, Mass.

EDITORIAL

The Legislature of 1916 is largely to blame for the forty cents increase in the tax rate for the present year, thru its refusal to admit a bill to allow the city to pay for its fire prevention work by the issue of short time bonds. There can be no question but what the work now being done in our school houses, of installing sprinkler systems, making additional exits and adding fireproof and anti-panic doors, is permanent in its nature and that its cost should be spread over several years, instead of becoming a burden on the tax payers of one year. The refusal of the Legislature added to the crude and theoretical conditions of the present Municipal Finance Law have added considerably to the tax levy of the city.

The Assessors are to be congratulated on the results of their own work in finding over three millions of new property to assess, the largest increase ever made in the history of the city.
It is particularly gratifying to also note that nearly two-thirds of this increase is in new buildings, and will become part of the permanent valuation of the city.

The local committee on relief of families of soldiers now on duty at the border, is calling for funds to meet the constantly growing demands which are being made upon them. Twenty-three families are now being aided under the direction of the committee and as the work is liable to continue for several months in the future, more money is needed. The committee would be glad to have any one interested communicate with Major Fred P. Barnes, of West Newton, secretary of the committee and particularly desires contributions which would be continued month by month until the soldiers return.

The gratifying increase in the earnings of the Boston & Maine Railroad is good news to the stockholders and highly creditable to the business ability of President James H. Hustis, and to Messrs. Henry B. Day and Charles P. Hall of this city, of its board of trustees.

COMPARISONS

Interesting Figures of Assessors' Valuations for 1915 and 1916

The following tables will give interesting comparisons between the valuations of different classes of property for 1916 and 1915. It will be noticed that every precinct shows a gain in the values of its buildings, the land remaining practically the same. Ward 6 is way in the lead in valuation of buildings as well as land, and Ward 5 is a good second. Personal valuations show considerable fluctuations, a number of precincts showing losses. Newton Highlands having the largest gain, with Chestnut Hill a close second. Ward 6 has the highest personal valuations with ward 7 close behind.

NORTH SHORE ROUTE

"On to Gloucester!" is a familiar sound at this time of year, and the famous fishing port is as attractive as ever. The sail down the harbor and along the north shore is delightful, and the trip is an easy and enjoyable one-day event. The steel steamers
"Cape Ann" and "City of Gloucester" leave Central wharf, at the foot of State street, Boston, at 10 A. M. and 2 P. M.; Sundays and holidays at 10.15 A. M. Leave Gloucester week days at 2.15 P. M.; Sundays and holidays at 3.15 P. M. The Atlantic avenue elevated and tunnel stations are opposite Central wharf.

Little Better Than Work.

"Why don't you go to work? There is plenty of it to be had. I should think an able-bodied chap like you would be ashamed to beg for a living." "Mister, begging is no snap. I have to work eight hours a day at it to get enough to live on."

OLD ITALIAN TOWN

VICENZA OF IMPORTANCE IN TIME OF THE ROMANS.

Its Achievements in Arms Rank Second to Its Architectural Splendors
—Once Capital of a Lombard Duchy.

Closely massed on both banks of the small Bacchiglione river, Vicenza, with an urban population of 35,000, has been an important town of northern Italy since the early Roman days, when it was known as Vicetia. It has not played a thrilling role in Italian history, however, but is noted rather for its architectural splendor than for its achievements in arms.

The surrounding plain, whose luxuriant mulberry trees, with their armies of silk worms, so soon may be supplanted by the cypress fronds of sorrow over countless soldiers' graves, extend to the north through Thiene and Schio, two manufacturing towns in the Leogra valley, and to the east as far as Venice, 40 miles distant.
Sixteen miles to the west, beyond the Berici mountains, lies Verona, with its many Shakespearean associations.
Beautiful villas and blossoming fields are a feature of this landscape now overcast with the shadow of invading Austrians.

Vicenza's share in the history-making of the early middle ages was as a capital of a Lombard duchy. It was one of the cities which formed the Lombard league in the twelfth century, opposing Frederick Barbarossa during the several campaigns whereby he attempted to re-establish the Western empire on a Charlemagne scale.

In 1236 the city was stormed and pil-laged by the Sicilian emperor, Frederick II, a catastrophe which the inhabitants were able to bear with more equanimity after this ruler's overwhelming defeat before the walls of Parma, when his imperial crown was placed in mockery on the head of a hunchback beggar, who was given a "triumphal entry" into the victorious town. Early in the fourteenth century Vicenza asserted and secured its Independence from Padua, but a hundred years later it came under the extensive sway of Venice.

The most distinguished name in Vicenza's hall of fame is that of one of the greatest architects of the Italian renaissance, Andrea Palladio, who broke away from the excessively ornate style of his contemporaries and turned, perhaps, too reverently to the simple, stately standards of ancient Rome. His handiwork is pre-eminently dominant in his birthplace, so much so, in fact, that a famous American novelist has complained that "the cold hand of that friend of virtuous poverty in architecture lies heavy upon his native city." One of the most interesting structures designed by him is the immense Olimpico theater, modeled after the ancient theaters, and dedicated in 1584.

Another great artist of Vicenza was the precocious peasant boy Mantegna, who left his flock of sheep at the age of eleven in order to become a great painter under the patronage of the unique Squarcione, a tailor famous both as art connoisseur and teacher.
The stiffness of Mantegna's draperies is said to be accounted for by his custom of drawing from models clad in paper or in gummed fabrics. As an engraver Mantegna's fame is assured by his plate, entitled "Entombment," said to have had a greater influence on art than any other ever executed, for its composition was adopted by Raphael, Holbein and Durer.

How London Grew.

Britain's great empire has grown just as the great city of London grew.
"You ride on a bus from Hampstead to the Strand, and you pass at least four High streets, each once the main thoroughfare of a former village," says Samuel P. Orth in the Imperial Impulse. "London is only a fortuitous collection of villages. It was never planned, it could not be planned. It has no community of interest save trade. It was never governed as a municipality."

"For years each parish had its own government; today it is governed by a county council. It is an amorphous aggregation of hovels, shops and palaces, with no limits or plan to its spreading."

"Like a terrible Broddingnagian ameba, it pushes its tentacles hither and thither, prompted only by the instinct for food."

Where He Would Be Useful.

After many efforts the aspiring singer had managed to get permission to give a trial performance at the local music hall. The house was full, and he warbled in his sweetest tones.
Everything seemed rosy until suddenly a hoarse voice came from the side of the stage.

"Here, you come off!" ordered the stage manager. "Can't you see you're emptying the house?"

"Er—I don't seem to be a success, then?" said the amateur, timorously.
"Success! Ha!" snorted the manager, angrily. "At clearing them out you're the most successful chap I ever met. Now, for goodness' sake, go and

Business and Pleasure.

"Do you think a man ought to let pleasure interfere with business?"
"Certainly not," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "Anybody who enjoys business as much as I do couldn't find any pleasure to equal it."

An extremely simple device for re-

Submarine Booms Trade.

In these days with many visitors rambling around the telescope man on the Battery sea wall does a land office business. Possibly it is his description of the remarkable sights to be seen by means of his long glass that is responsible for the trade. Some of them are described on a neat canvas sign as follows:

"This telescope shows Statue of Liberty, 1 1/4 miles away and 305 feet high.
Also cannon, forts and soldiers on Governor's Island. Liners and ships may be seen, including captains and passengers. Views 5 cents."

Perhaps there is in the last sentence a subtle suggestion that the liners may be submariners; in other words, "take a last look at your friends." At any rate he never fails to call attention to passing liners which mount guns for defense against submarine guns, demanding that passersby take this chance of getting a good look at the guns mounted on the stern. This is a never-failing attraction nowadays and means a fresh shower of nickels for the telescope man.—New York Times.

Dry Plates.

On a recent evening during a rainstorm, and while the downpour was heaviest, a man dropped one of numerous packages he was carrying, just as he crossed Meridian street, near the public library, and passed on, unaware of his loss. The incident was witnessed by many persons who had sought the shelter in the entrance to the library, and by many others watching the storm from the windows of the Board of Trade building. For fully ten minutes it lay in the rain, seemingly an object of much curiosity to those who had seen it tumble from the man's arms. Then a young man in the Board of Trade building, urged on by his fellow-employees, braved the torrent, and snapping the package un-

On the Modern Woman.

Justus Miles Forman, in his three last novels, may be said to have drawn three sides of the modern woman. In "The Opening Door" the heroine found out a way to serve "the cause" when she discovered the role of militant suffragist was not for her; in "The Blind Spot" a rich New York girl became interested in schemes for civic betterment, and in his last novel, "The Twin Sisters," the girl shows that she cares for other things as well.

"I want to be petted and flattered," she says, "and put upon a little pedestal. I want to be told that I am pretety and that I inspire my man to do whatever it is he does better than he did it before. I want—children . . .
But there's something more—something that has been slowly developing in us women through the long climb upward from savagery. We've grown another want—at least, I think we have. We've grown a desire to use our brains."

The Tendency of Every Man Is to Live up to His Name

By J. R. HAMILTON

Former Advertising Manager of Wanamaker's, Philadelphia

Wherever you find a good name you will find some man trying to live up to it. Character follows reputation far more quickly than reputation follows character. No one ever lost his good name except through folly.

What the world thinks of a man is the very best moral tonic that is sold under the label of philosophy.

And it is the same with merchandise as it is with men. The nameless thing is dreaded everywhere, while the thing with a good name is usually good because you expect it to be.

Men grow proud of their products. You will find a manufacturer saying, "This shoe has got to be good because it bears my name." You will find a canner saying, "I cannot use lye any more than I can tell a lie." You will find a clothing manufacturer saying, "If I am 'all wool,' my clothing must also be all wool."

And so it goes with every single product that carries a brand or a name. Whenever a man sets a standard, he strives to live up to it; and whenever the world sets that standard, he doubles the effort.

Which simply means, if you want the best, you must ask for the best. And every time you ask, you make it better.

There is hardly one of you readers who does not know the name of every good product on the market. From clothing to sugar and from hosiery to baking powder some good name is indelibly fixed in your mind, yet, when you ask for an article, most of the time you do not use that name.

And every time you fail to do so, you discourage the maker, you lower the standard for yourself and you allow some inferior thing to gain in strength and capacity.

Let this go home in your mind: You set the standard of merchandise. The maker follows your ideals. Adulterations creep in through your laxity. Whenever you ask for any old thing, you get it.

While you are reading the advertising news in this paper today, make up your mind to ask only for what you know to be good; to learn what is best and demand it and to have no parley with the nameless things of trade.

WILBUR THEATRE—Monday night next, August 14th, Ye Wilbur Theatre opens its regular season, when Elizabeth Marbury and F. Ray Comstock will present the smart and bright musical comedy "Very Good Eddie." This musical comedy is now in its tenth month of an exceptionally successful run in New York.

"Very Good Eddie" is said to be a companion piece to "Nobody Home," which opened the season at this house just about a year ago, and ran for three months in Boston, possessing all of its charm, although entirely different in theme. It is said even to surpass its predecessor in the luxury of the 14 sparkling and tuneful popular musical numbers.

The story is handled in the most uproarious, yet delicate, manner by the author. Laughing situations follow one another in speed limit fashion. The music is exceptionally tuneful and "Very Good Eddie" is said by the New York critics to have the smartest chorus which has been seen on the stage for a long time. These fascinating girls wear the latest things in the way of dresses; in fact, there are all kinds of styles of girls and gowns to attract attention.

EVIDENCE IN A SINGLE HAIR

Human or Animal? What Kind of Animal? Scientists Can Tell Without Fail.

To the German analyst hair is packed with information. The approximate age and physical condition can be constructed by an examination of a single hair. Melville Davison Post writes in the Saturday Evening Post.

The hair of every animal has certain distinguishing characteristics. It is not to be mistaken by a competent investigator. Some animals, as for example the cow, have three types of hair. These will be known by their structure. Under a proper microscopical examination hairs will be as easily distinguished by an expert as varieties of trees in a grove will be distinguished by a forester.

There was a case in which a dagger found on the prisoner had a few short hairs caught entangled in a nick of the blade. He explained this by saying that he had used the dagger to kill a rabbit that he had found trapped in a hedge. The authorities reported to the police, after an examination of the dagger, that the hairs were not of human origin, but they also added that they were not rabbit hairs—they were squirrel hairs.

The police were extremely puzzled until they finally discovered that on the night of the homicide the prisoner had worn a great coat trimmed with squirrel fur. He had, in fact, carefully washed the knife after the assassination and thereby removed every evidence of his act, but, unfortunately for him, he made the mistake of attempting to dry the dagger by wiping it on the fur lining of his great coat.

SOME FACTS ABOUT RADIUM

Found Only in the Most Minute Quantities—Minerals That Carry It Easy to Determine.

Radium is a metal and is described as having a white metallic luster. It has been isolated only once or twice and few people have seen it. Radium is ordinarily obtained from its ores in the form of hydrous sulphate, chloride or bromide, and it is in the form of these salts that it is usually sold and used. These are all white or nearly white substances, whose appearance is no more remarkable than common salt or baking powder. Radium is found in nature in such exceedingly small quantities that it is never visible even when the material is examined with a microscope. Ordinarily radium ore carries only a small fraction of a grain to the ton of material, and radium will never be found in large quantities because it is formed by the decay of uranium, a process which is wonderfully slow, and radium itself decays and changes to other elements so rapidly that it is impossible for it to accumulate naturally in visible masses. Minerals that carry radium, however, are fairly easy to determine. One of them, pitchblende, as generally found, is a black mineral about as heavy as ordinary iron, but much softer. The principal radium mineral, carnotite, has a bright canary yellow color, and is generally powdery. There are other radium-bearing minerals of less importance.

Webster's Power Over Audience.

An interesting anecdote of Daniel Webster is found in "Bygone Days in Boston" in the North American Review. Webster was delivering an address in Faneuil hall on the necessity for individual exertion and unflinching patriotism to avert the dangers that threatened the political party whose principles he espoused, when he perceived a terrible sway of the packed assembly, consequent on the rush of those endeavoring to enter, and noted the danger that might ensue. The orator stopped short in the middle of a sentence, advanced to the edge of the platform, extended his arms in an authoritative attitude, and, in a stentorian voice of command, cried out: "Let each man stand firm!" The effect was instantaneous. Each man stood firm; the great heaving mass of humanity gained its equilibrium, and, save the long breath of relief that filled the air, perfect stillness ensued. "That," exclaimed the great orator, "is what we call self-government!" so apt an illustration of the principle he was expounding that the vast audience responded with deafening cheers.

Five Kinds of Thunderstorms.

Recent study of thunderstorms has resulted in science's dividing them into five distinct types. They are the heat thunderstorms which occur in regions of high temperature and nearly uniform pressure; storms which occur in the southeast quadrant of an almost circular cyclone; storms which occur between two anticyclones; and those which occur on the boundary between warm and cold waves. Of these, all but the first are produced by the over and under-running of winds of different temperatures, which in some way not yet understood, cause masses of moist air to rise.

Matter of Business.

"I hope you don't associate with that man I saw you speak to in the street just now?"

"Associate with him! What do you take me for? The man, sir, is one of the most rascally, corrupt, sneaking, under-handed, low-down, villainous, and depraved scoundrels that ever kept out of jail!"

"I know it. But why are you on speaking terms with him at all?"

"Why, I'm—er—his lawyer."

HEALTHY RIVALRY IS BEST

Boys and Girls Need Something Besides Home Training, Asserts Eastern Journal.

The father of two school children who refuses to have his offspring vaccinated, and therefore does not send them to school, says the mother is just as well qualified as any teacher to instruct the children at home.

This parent misses the point of something more than the inoculating quill, the Philadelphia Ledger asserts. Of course, the mother knows her own children, and no doubt has retained from her own schooldays and subsequent reading enough book learning to qualify as their instructress. Many wise men and good women have profitably gone to school at the mother's knee in the three R's as well as in piety. But the rule is that children do better who face the competition of the schoolroom and undergo the discipline of healthy rivalry with their comrades. There is less danger of growing up a spoiled or a solitary minded child.

Every boy and girl needs that part of schooling which comes from other pupils, not from the teacher. There is evil sometimes mingled with the good, and a careful supervision must go as far as it can to check any pernicious influence. But the child grows up to a world to give and take, and must know how to "fear God and take his own part" in it. Moreover, there is nothing like keeping the definite hours and following the plan of impartial, inflexible routine in the school life. Home is a respecter of persons; the mother is likely to be led by her affections into an overtenderness that tempers the wind to her shorn lamb. The republic of school stands upon the doctrine of equality in human rights. Fair play is its reign of law. It is not disparaging the mother to say that in normal pupillage the teacher who is "no relation" is the best.

DERIVED FROM RARE EARTHS

Where Some of the Most Valuable Metals Known Have Been Discovered by Scientists.

Rare earths are the oxides of such metals as thorium, cerium, titanium, zirconium, tantalum, niobium, tungsten, uranium and vanadium. The most common and familiar uses of these metals are: For thorium and cerium in the making of gas mantles, and for tungsten in the making of incandescent lamps. Tungsten, together with vanadium, is also used in making certain kinds of steel. Thorium, or one of its compounds, is used extensively in searchlights, motor car headlights, and in flashlight powders. Cerium alloyed with certain metals makes the flaming alloy used in cigar and gas lighters and to trace the flight of artillery shells. The same metal, or one of its salts, is used in photography, in dyeing leather and for coloring glass. Titanium alloyed with iron is often used to purify steel, cast iron and cast copper. Zirconium oxide makes crucibles and similar vessels that, even when brought to a white heat, can be plunged into cold water without cracking. Tantalum makes surgical and dental instruments that will not rust and that can be sharpened like steel and sterilized by intense heat. Nine-tenths of the tungsten and the vanadium produced is used in making steel.

Old Wines.

Some time ago a bottle of ancient wine was found during the demolition of an old house at Finsbury, England. It appears that this ancient bottle is eclipsed by the treasures of France. Some of the cellars in Paris contain bottles of Sauterne at least two centuries old. This is a very respectable age, but it is nothing compared with a certain Ribeaupierre of 1652, or a Steinwein of 1540, or a Jewish Passover wine of five centuries and a half. Still, in the museum at Reims there is a far older wine, or rather a bottle containing something which was once wine.

It is said to date four centuries before our era. This, tradition says, was found in a tomb of the Gallo-Roman period. Berthelot, the celebrated chemist, has left on record that he once analyzed a bottle of wine made in the neighborhood of Rome about Nero's time. In this case the analyst had only a dry residuum to work upon.

Couldn't Blame Him.

"You were pretty well pickled when I brought you in last night," said the copper to the man who had been arraigned in municipal court.

"Was I?" replied the man, whose thumping head was also telling him that he had drunk not wisely but too well.

"You sure were. You gave the desk-sergeant your name and address, but you couldn't for the life of you tell your occupation. You tried and tried, but you couldn't say it."

"Well, no wonder! I'm a statistician!"

The Usual Way.

"Say, Grimshaw! Would you recommend young Sam Skook as being of good moral character and entirely worthy of confidence? I have a position of trust for which he is an applicant."

"Certainly!" replied Grimshaw heartily. "Give the young fellow a show, Jinglefritz." Then after the inquirer had passed onward, satisfied, Grimshaw turned to Trotter. "Who the deuce is young Sam Skook?" he asked.—Kansas City Star.

Cultivate the Habit of Cheerfulness

By ORISON SWETT MARDEN.

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

A woman in California, who, because of crushing sorrow, had fallen a victim to despondency, insomnia and kindred ills, determined to throw off the gloom which was making life so heavy a burden to her, and established a rule that she would laugh at least three times a day, whether occasion presented or not. Accordingly, she trained herself to laugh heartily at the least provocation, and would retire to her room and make merry by herself. She was soon in excellent health and buoyant spirits, and her home became a sunny, cheerful abode.

To people who have lost the laughing habit I would say: Lock yourself in your room and practice smiling. Smile at your pictures, furniture, looking-glass, anything, just so the stiff muscles are brought into play again.

In order to become normal, the natural fun-loving forces within us must be released. Laughter is one form of exercise which sets them free, rescues men from the "blues."

Somewhere I have read of a man whose "laughing muscles" were so paralyzed that his laughter sounded like a voice from the tombs. American life is so serious that many men lose their power to laugh. They can force a little sepulchral chuckle, but the genuine side-shaking laughter is almost a stranger to their experience. They are in such a serious chase after the dollar, their life is so strenuous, so given to scheming and planning, that they do not have much time to laugh. They do not know the medicinal value there is in the habit of laughter, how it clears the cobwebs out of the brain, disposes of the pangs of worry and anxiety and business pressure, takes the mind off the grind of things, removes friction, and helps to make life worth while.

You may not be able to cultivate the optimistic temperament to any great extent, if you lack it, but cheerfulness can be cultivated. We all know that if we brood over our sorrows, and dwell upon our misfortunes, our physical being very quickly sympathizes with our moods.

"Talk happiness. The world is sad enough without your woe."

A woman who has had great affliction says: "I have had nothing I could give but myself, and so I made the resolution that I would never sadden anyone with my troubles. I have laughed and told jokes when I could have wept. I have smiled in the face of every misfortune. I have tried to let everyone go away from my presence with a happy word and bright thought to carry with them. Happiness makes happiness, and I myself am happier than I would have been had I sat down and bemoaned my fate."

"Encourage your child to be merry and laugh aloud," says a great French surgeon. "A good hearty laugh expands the chest and makes the blood bound merrily along."

We realize that it is very necessary to train the mind in business principles; to train certain faculties to do special things, but do not seem to think it necessary to cultivate the habit of cheerfulness. Yet not even an education is as necessary to the child as the formation of the cheerful habit. This ought to be regarded as the first essential of the preparation for life—the training of the mind toward sunshine; the developing of every possibility of the cheerful faculties.

Cheerfulness is one of the great miracle-workers of the world. It reinforces the whole man, doubles and trebles his power, and gives new meaning to his life.

Stops Heat Rays.

An interesting chemical paint which has the property of intercepting the heat rays of the sun, has recently been put on the market by a German concern. It may be applied to tin, corrugated iron, slate or glass, indeed, any material used in the roofing of buildings, and by its peculiar quality leaves the room beneath the roof comparatively cool. It is stated that the temperature of workrooms may be reduced from 15 to 20 degrees Fahrenheit, according to the surface which can be covered, and the added efficiency of the workmen thus promoted is a direct and measurable gain. The paint is light blue in color, so that, if applied to glass, it does not appreciably influence the light. Its components are at present a trade secret, but the fact that many large electric and manufacturing companies in Germany are regular users is cited as evidence that it is practical.

Old Registration System.

The papery of the Roman period have conclusively proved that registration of land already existed in a highly elaborate form, and that it was instituted not only in the interests of the state, but also—some think even primarily—in the interests of private individuals. That point comes out clearly in an important edict of a first-century prefect, who ordains that contracts affecting real property were not to be drawn up without due authorization from the keepers of the public archives. These officials had to keep the registers up to date, entering in them all mortgages and other charges, as well as changes of ownership, and they were thus enabled to protect an intending purchaser from oversights and frauds.—New York Press.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

One of the surest keys to success lies in thoroughness. No matter how great may be the enterprise undertaken a regard for small things is necessary. Just as the little courtesies of everyday life make life worth while the living, so the little details form the bone and sinew of a great success.—Edward Bok.

GOOD THINGS FOR TABLE.

The delicious crumpet are most eatable baked in ordinary gem pans. Take half a yeast cake, three cups of warm milk, two tablespoonsful of melted butter, one saltspoonful of salt, a tea-spoonful of soda, dissolved in hot water and flour to make a good batter. Set these ingredients with the exception of the soda and butter over night. In the morning beat very hard and add the soda and butter; if too thin add a little more flour and pour the mixture into buttered gem pans; let rise 15 minutes and bake quickly. They will not need to be warmed over.

Canned Peas With Fresh Carrots.—Scrape two carrots and cut into quarters lengthwise, then in pieces an inch long and one-fourth inch wide. Let simmer with barely water to cover; add peas that have been reheated to the carrots, season with sugar, salt, butter and lemon juice.

Baked Milk.—Baked milk is a delicacy often recommended for invalids. Put milk in a stone jar, cover closely and let it bake slowly for several hours, when it should be thick and creamy. The flavor is unique and somewhat like Devonshire cream. It may be served as a custard or in combination with fruit.

Asparagus Luncheon Salad.—Mix together two cupsful each of cooked asparagus and shredded lettuce with a tablespoonful of olive oil and a teaspoonful of vinegar. Mix with a boiled dressing and arrange in nests of lettuce or cress and garnish with hard cooked eggs and more dressing.

Roasted Onions.—Select large onions of uniform size and arrange in an earthen dish without removing the peelings. Bake until tender, then peel them; place in a covered dish steaming hot; make a rich white sauce with butter and thin cream and pour over the onions. They are delicious when served cut open, seasoned with butter, salt and a bit of cream.

Nellie Maxwell The KITCHEN CABINET

If there is one who is capable of succeeding and fitted to achieve, it is the man who has abandoned the petty dissensions and everyday vexes of his kind, who is strong to rule his body and his mind, and who pursues with fixed resolve the path of unswerving integrity and sterling virtue.—James Allen.

DELECTABLE SWEETS.

Many times a dessert is more appealing because of its daintiness, rather than because of its nutritive value, so a light dessert is much better for the average diner, as he is usually apt to eat too much. The following dessert, however, is quite nutritious.

Italian Cream.—Mix a pint of rich cream with a cupful of milk and sweeten with four tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Add half a cupful of extract of bitter almond and a gill of rose water. Beat these well together, then stir in an ounce of gelatin which has been soaked for an hour in one cupful of water. Stir well, fill into wetted molds and set in a cold place until firm.

English Trifle.—Cut a stale sponge-cake in slices, spread with different kinds of preserves or jam and put them together again. Place in a deep glass dish and pour over enough fruit juice of any kind to soak the cake well, then cover with apricot or strawberry jam. Make a rich custard of a pint of milk, a piece of cinnamon, and rind of lemon, and four eggs; cook until thick, not forgetting to add salt and sugar to taste. When the custard is cold pour over the cake and cover all with sweetened whipped cream, flavoring with two tablespoonfuls of marischino and garnish with the cherries. This is truly quite elegant and elaborate.

Milanese Ice.—Make a quart of rich boiled custard, making it quite sweet, add a tablespoonful of softened gelatin and when cool turn into a freezer, stir and as soon as it becomes thick stir in a cupful of stoned raisins, softened by steaming, a half cupful of finely chopped almonds, one cupful of preserved strawberries and a pint of whipped cream. Stir and beat well, then freeze until stiff.

Bacon Sandwiches.—Very thin broiled bacon put between slices of toasted graham bread with a piece of crisp lettuce between is another appetizing sandwich.

MORE FIREWORKS

Next Wednesday night's display of fireworks at Braves Field will include a number of striking novel features, wholly different from anything seen at any of the previous pyrotechnic displays at "the home of big things." One of these unique set pieces—and set pieces will again predominate in the program—will be an angel flying through space and finally alighting upon a pedestal and displaying to view the one word "Peace." A somewhat different sentiment will be expressed in another of the set pieces which is designed to show the "spirit of '76." Then there will be an acrobat doing all sorts of amusing stunts, two clowns and a mule in circus antics, while during the show a big duck will waddle across the field laying eggs en route. It was pretty generally agreed that the finale of the show last week was about the best ever but the fireworks makers have promised something even more beautiful and amazing—not to say noisy—for next week's wind-up.

It may be stated without fear of contradiction that these pyrotechnic exhibitions at Braves Field are the greatest ever seen in Boston or elsewhere. The size of the field makes possible the staging of features impossible elsewhere, while the contract price of each show, varying between $3500 and $4000 is more than twice as much as has ever been expended elsewhere in Boston for a single display of fireworks. The fact that there are seats for everybody at popular prices also adds to the enjoyment of the thousands who have become bitten by the "fireworks bug" this summer since the first of these shows—next week's will be the sixth—was staged at Braves Field.

POLICE NOTES

John A. McDonald of 28 Ash st. Auburndale, a Boston contractor, was fined $20 by Judge Kennedy Monday morning on the charge of speeding on the Commonwealth ave. boulevard.
 The complainant was special officer E. E. Savory, who testified that the defendant's car was traveling at the rate of 48 miles an hour. An appeal was taken by McDonald.
 Ignazio Berardi and Domenica Venturini, who went through a marriage ceremony before City Clerk Grant on July 14, were in court Monday morning, and a fine of $20 was imposed upon Berardi. The police exhibited a letter received from the American consul showing that Berardi had a wife and 3 children in Italy and that he sent over for his second bride in June. Since their wedding they have lived at 19 Alden place, West Newton. Judge Kennedy warned them that they must not live together and if they did he promised a jail sentence. Both claimed not to know the law.
 William Forte, of 177 Chapel street, Nonantum, was arraigned before Judge Kennedy Tuesday morning charged with the larceny of $25 from his brother, Joseph. It was charged that William entered his brother's home and stole a check for $25, which he indorsed and cashed at the Newton Trust Company. Judge Kennedy held him in $500 bonds.
 Richard A. Farmer and Salvatore Sarra of West Newton were in the Police Court yesterday morning, charged with the unlawful appropriation of an automobile. Sarra was found guilty and fined $25. He appealed. Farmer's case was continued until Nov. 11.
 On July 29, Sarra, who does odd jobs around the premises of E. W. Graves on Waltham street, West Newton, took the machine of Mr. Graves from the garage, saying he was going to wash it. He claims the break and clutch would not work, so he drove it to the shop of Farmer to have it repaired. They then drove to Boston in order to test it out.
 The Newton police had been notified by a neighbor of Mr. Graves, who knowing that Mr. Graves was away on his vacation, thought the auto was being stolen. The Boston police were notified and the pair were apprehended at Scollay square.

 —A new entrance is being constructed to the kindergarten room of the Roger Wolcott School, this is the section used for voting on election days and for primaries and with the new entrance there will be no disturbance to the school sessions.
 —Messrs. Allen Wiley and William Saville, Jr., returned from Plattsburg on Wednesday. Both enjoyed the experience at Plattsburg and returned in excellent condition. Mr. Dana Dutch of Waban avenue left this week with the senior division for Plattsburg.
 —Mr. Harold Woson of Neshoboroad, who is on the Mexican border as captain of the Supply Company of the Eighth Regiment, writes that he is quite comfortable in his temporary home, the quarters being fitted with shower, baths, electric lights, etc., and the heat not as bad as one might expect. Mr. Woson because of his musical talent is called on every day to furnish entertainment for the men.

STRIKE AVERTED

The reinstatement of Conductor Ralph Hodge by the Middlesex and Boston Street Railway Company this morning has averted a strike which earlier in the week appeared to be inevitable. The following statement was issued by the Union and it was said that the Union had voted to strike unless its claim was allowed.
 "Division 600, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees of America, in order to make clear to the public what the difficulty is just now between it and the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway, wants to correct some misstatements that have been made in the press concerning the division's attitude in the case of Albert Hodge. We claim that the company violated its agreement so far as Mr. Hodge's record was concerned. We claim that the company has no right to discharge him for not running an extra trip after he had completed a full day's work.
 "Contrary to the statement of the company in the public press, our meeting, Aug. 4, voted to arbitrate the Hodge case, and we appointed our arbitrator. We have drafted articles of arbitration, and have submitted them to Mr. Richards, president of the company. The company has until next Thursday to decide whether it will arbitrate, and select its arbitrator.
 "If it does not comply with its agreement, or refuses the fair arbitration which we have offered, we will of course have to be governed by the action of the meeting of last Friday, and our international laws. We have communicated with our international president and are acting under his advice."
 The statement is signed by William T. Egan, president; John J. Duffy, Division 1; Walter H. Clark, Division 2; Alfred P. McLain, Division 4; William J. Marshall, Division 5; George Deary, representing barnmen, executive board.
 The railway serves 19 cities and towns, and a strike would tie up the system. There are about 321 members of the union out of 600 employees of the railway.
 A board of arbitrators has been appointed to consider differences between the Company and the Union in regard to wages paid to certain classes of employees. Mr. A. A. Ballantyne for the Company, Hon. James H. Vahney for the Union and Mr. Henry Sawyer as the third member of the board.

Chlorine.

Chlorine, which in its liquid form the Germans are said to be using in their poison bombs, owes its discovery as an element, as well as its name, to a British scientist, Humphrey Davy. It was in 1810 that he found the mysterious gas to be indecomposable into other elements. Should we decide to flatter the Germans by imitating them there would be no difficulty in finding the chlorine. The earth and the sea are full of it, in the form of salt. It would indeed be difficult not to find chlorine—in one or other of its combinations—wherever one tried, in earth, air or water; but it would be impossible to find it anywhere except in alliance with another element. Workmen who split up common salt—chlorine of sodium—in order to get the chlorine gas for use in the process, but as a set-off their teeth decay.—London Chronicle.

Nature is Ruthless.

Nature is ruthless, and where her sway is uncontested there is no peace save the peace of death; and the fecund stream of life, especially of life on the lower levels, flows like an immense torrent out of nonexistence for but the briefest moment before the enormous majority of the beings composing it are engulfed in the jaws of death, and again go out into the shadow.—Theodore Roosevelt, in Scribner's Magazine.

HIGH HONORS

Two Newton young men, Lieutenants B. R. Ware, Jr., and Miles Libbey, have received letters of commendation from the Secretary of the Navy for the excellent work done by the officers and men of the super-dreadnaught Texas in winning the Battle efficiency pennant, the gunnery trophy and the Engineering trophy of the entire United States Navy. Only six officers have received these letters of commendation, which are considered quite an honor.

Drawbacks of Medieval Meat.

Much of the medieval meat—which Jobbitt says was plentiful and cheap—must have been poor stuff. Until the introduction of root crops in the eighteenth century cattle and sheep did not become even moderately plump till the end of summer, while lack of fodder made it impossible to keep much live stock during the winter. On St. Martin's day (November 1) arrangements were usually made or slaughtered on a large scale, and the next six months fresh meat worth eating was practically unobtainable. Until the spring grass was again ready there was a run on salted beef and salted mutton. Salted beef is excellent for a change. But have you ever tried salted mutton?—London Chronicle.

Rain.

There are so many things worse than rain that we refuse to fret about it. If we had the toothache every other day for two months straight we might growl; if an amateur cornetist lived next door and practiced regularly we should complain; if bills were sent in once a week instead of once a month, if bores never went home, if all friendship were mercenary and false in adversity, if sickness visited us oftener and stayed longer than health, if malicious people were many and the kind few we might justifiably be miserable and remain so.
 But so long as so many wrong things that could be don't arrive it can rain every day if it wants to. Most of our joy is weatherproof.

Purpose of the Hatband.

The original purpose of the hatband was to hold a piece of cloth or linen round the head. Egyptians, in 3,500 B. C., wore headgear which consisted of a piece of linen, with a band tied round terminating in two tails at the back, and a survival of this is to be found in the tails of the present-day Scottish bonnet and a sailor's cap. Again, the origin of the clocks on stockings was that they were a species of ornamentation to hide the seams where the stuff was joined together, and the "points" on the backs of gloves were used to cover the seams in the gloves of early times.

Wealth is no sinecure. Moreover the value of money depends partly on knowing what to do with it, partly on the manner in which it is acquired.—Sir John Lubbock.

WHOLE SOME RHUBARB.

Though a vegetable, rhubarb is used in every respect as a fruit. It is stimulating, refreshing and acts as a foe to rheumatism and gout; it is also a complexion beautifier. As a medicine its value is well known, for few have escaped a dose of the bitter root. One of the simplest of ways to serve rhubarb as a dessert is to place slices of buttered bread in a baking dish, alternating with finely cut rhubarb and sugar with a dash of nutmeg if liked; bake until the rhubarb is soft.

Rhubarb Jelly.—Wash and cut into short lengths one pound of rhubarb. Stew until tender with six heaping tablespoonsful of sugar and the thinly pared rind of half a lemon. Rub through a sieve, add three heaping tablespoonsful of gelatin, dissolved in one cupful of boiling water, a few drops of red coloring, mix well and pour into a mold. Turn out when firm and serve with sweetened whipped cream. The red color will not be necessary to add if the rhubarb is a pink skin. Leave that on while it is cooking.

Rhubarb Ice Cream.—Put a quart of rhubarb into a saucepan with one cupful of water and six tablespoonsful of sugar or more as it seems best; allow it to cook until the rhubarb is tender, then rub through a sieve. Add one tablespoonful of ginger extract and a little red coloring, mix with a pint of whipped and sweetened cream, or a custard may be added instead of the cream. Freeze as usual.

Rhubarb Compote.—Wash and cut the stalks into five-inch lengths. Make a rich sirup of sugar and when boiling drop in the rhubarb; cook until tender, then remove carefully to a glass dish and pour the sirup over. Each length should be unbroken. Serve cold with lady fingers and cream.

Imagine these mountains crumbled and broken on their east sides into precipices sometimes three or four thousand feet deep and flanked everywhere by lesser peaks and tumbled masses of smaller size in whose hollows lie the most beautiful lakes you have ever dreamed of.

Imagine everywhere mountain gorges of the utmost wildness. Imagine rushing rivers and waterfalls. Imagine valleys clothed with pines right up to timber line where trees cannot grow because it is too high and in winter too cold and windy.

Imagine what all this looks like in summer, and then some summer go there yourself and you will find that you did not imagine even a small part of its real beauty.

Down from the Continental Divide, which the crest of the mountains is called because it divides the streams that flow eastward into the Atlantic Ocean from those that flow westward into the Pacific, descend nineteen principal valleys, seven on the east side and twelve on the west. Of course there are very many smaller valleys tributary to each of these larger valleys. Through these valleys run the rivers from the glaciers far up on the mountains.

Many of these valleys have not yet been thoroughly explored. It is probable that some of them have never been entered except by Indians; for there are Indians still living during the summers in the Glacier National Park. The great Blackfoot Indian Reservation, one of the many tracts of land set apart for the Indians still remaining in this country, adjoins the Glacier National Park on the west. Northwestward, the park adjoins the Waterton Lakes Park in Canada.

There are 250 known lakes. Probably there are small ones in the wilder parts which white men have not yet even seen.

This region was not visited by white men till 1853 when a Government engineer exploring for a route to the Pacific Ocean ascended one of the creeks by mistake and returned when he found that no railroad could be built there. The next explorers were engineers who went in to establish the Canadian boundary line in 1861.

In 1890 copper was found at the head of Quana Creek, and there was a rush of prospectors. In 1896 Congress bought the land east of the Continental Divide from the Blackfoot Indians, but not enough copper was found to pay for the mining. Since then few persons went there but big game hunters till 1910 when it was made a National Park.

There are now several very fine hotels and several camps on the east side. Most of the tourists go there, but the west side is wonderfully beautiful, too, and hotels and camps are found there also.

There are a few good roads for automobiles and trails for walking and horseback riding. A railroad touches its southern boundary.

PREPAREDNESS IN THE SIXTIES

Among all that has been said regarding preparedness, I have seen nothing about the steps looking to preparation for war which Massachusetts took at the close of the Civil War. I cannot go into the details of the movement without consulting the state records, but I have a very vivid recollection of what took place since I was one of the victims of what proved to be a very unwise procedure. I think it was in 1865 that the Legislature passed a law requiring all able bodied citizens between the ages of 18 and 45 to enlist in the militia. The law provided that, up to a certain date, citizens could form companies and choose their own officers. After that date the citizens within certain fixed localities were to be drafted for service and formed into companies.

I was living in Chelsea at that time and rather than be drafted to serve in a company with Tom, Dick and Harry, a lot of us got together and organized a military company of 101 men. The new company was drawn from the first families of Chelsea and socially it was all that could be desired.

There were many doubters among our friends who said that the law would not be enforced, and they remained inactive. The time limit for enlistment expired and then we all waited for the enforced enlistment to take place.

The citizens were notified to select officers for the first company in each district. Chelsea, Revere and Winthrop formed the military district in which I lived. The citizens of Winthrop thought to capture the first set of officers and they came to Chelsea in many barges with the idea of packing the meeting. The Chelsea boys they got together enough citizens to outvote the Winthrop party. The meeting selected three Chelsea men to command the first company. And that was the end. Whether the law was repealed or whether it became a dead letter I cannot say, but nothing more was done about it, and we who organized a company at the outset found ourselves held for three years, while the doubters stood aside and laughed at us. That was the history of preparedness in the sixties. Will it be repeated?

I served my three years in the Chelsea Company, which was given a regiment and a letter in duplicate of the first company that Chelsea furnished for the Civil War.—Co. H, 1st Mass. Regiment. In Sept., 1866, we went into camp at Sharon with the 1st Brigade, Brig. Genl. Burritt. On one of the days we were reviewed by Gov. Alex. H. Bullock and on another day by Genl. Benj. F. Butler, Gilmore's Band, led by P. S. Gilmore, was our regimental band. I look backward with a good deal of pride to my first and only individual experience of military duty. My name comes early in the alphabetical list and the first night in camp I was put on guard. It was raining hard and my duty was to stand on guard by the side of the Colonel's horse and see that no one stole the blankets. I scored a perfect success.

Would it not be well for the advocates of preparedness to look up the history of what was done, or rather, not done about preparedness in 1865?

OUR NATIONAL PARKS

Mount Rainier National Park in Washington has 48 Square Miles of Glaciers

In the northwestern corner of the United States rises, from the Cascade Mountains, a series of extinct volcanoes ice-clad from summit to foot the year around. Foremost among them, counting from south to north, are Mount Shasta in California; Mount Hood in Oregon; Mount St. Helens, Mount Adams, Mount Rainier and Mount Baker in Washington. Once, in the dim ages when America was making, they blazed across the sea like huge beacons. Today, their fires quenched, they suggest a stalwart band of Knights of the Ages, helmeted in snow, armored in ice, standing at parade upon a carpet patterned gorgeously in wild flowers.

Easily chief of this knightly band is Mount Rainier, a giant towering 14,408 feet above tide water in Puget Sound. Home-bound sailors far at sea mend their courses from his silver summit. Travelers over land catch the sun glint from his shining sides at a distance of more than one hundred and fifty miles. His glorious snow-crowned dome is easily visible more than one hundred miles distant.

This mountain has a glacier system far exceeding in size and impressive beauty that of any other in the United States. From its summit and cirques twenty-eight named rivers of ice pour slowly down its sides. There are others unnamed. Seen upon the map, as if from an aeroplane, one thinks of it as an enormous frozen octopus stretching icy tentacles down upon every side among the rich gardens of wild flowers and splendid forests of fir and cedars below.

Every winter the moisture-laden winds from the Pacific, suddenly cooled against its summit, deposit upon its top and sides enormous snows. These, settling in the mile-wide crater which was left after a great explosion in some prehistoric age carried away perhaps two thousand feet of the volcano's former height, press with overwhelming weight down the mountain's sloping sides.

Thus are born the glaciers, for the snow under its own pressure quickly hardens into ice. Through fourteen valleys self-carved in the solid rock flow these rivers of ice, now turning, as rivers of water turn, to avoid the harder rock strata, now roaring over precipices like congealed water falls, now rippling, like water currents, over rough bottoms, pushing, pouring, relentlessly on until they reach those parts of their courses where warmer air turns them into rivers of water.

There are forty-eight square miles of these glaciers, ranging in width from five hundred feet to a full mile and in thickness from fifty feet to many hundreds, perhaps even more than a thousand feet.

Mount Rainier is nearly three miles high, measured from sea level. It rises nearly two miles above its immediate base. Once it was a complete cone like the famous Fujiyama, the sacred mountain of Japan. Then it was probably 16,000 feet high.

Indian legends tell of the great eruption which blew its top off. There have been slight eruptions within memory, one in 1843, one in 1854, one in 1858 and the last in 1870. Even now it is only dormant. Jets of steam melt fantastic holes in the snow and ice at its summit, and there are hot springs at its foot. But it is entirely safe to visit Mount Rainier. Further eruptions are unlikely and, in any event, would simply announce their coming.

The National Park which incloses Mount Rainier is about eighteen miles square, containing three hundred and twenty-four square miles. It is easily reached by railroad and automobile from neighboring cities. A new automobile road enables stages to bring visitors to beautiful Paradise Valley, whose flowered slopes are bordered by the great Nisqually, Paradise and Stevens Glaciers. One may reach this point in four hours from Tacoma and return the same day. But it is a spot where the visitor may well spend weeks.

The Nisqually Glacier is the most impressive though by no means the largest of the glaciers. It is five miles long and, at Paradise Valley, is half a mile wide. Glistening white and fairly smooth at its shining source on the mountain's summit, its surface here is soiled with dust and broken stone and squeezed and rent by terrible pressure into fantastic shapes. Innumerable crevasses, or cracks, many feet deep break across it, caused by the more

TO PROTECT CROSSINGS

Boston & Albany Adopts New Plan for its Grade Crossings

The Boston and Albany R. R. is to proceed, at once, to place additional safeguards and new and more signs of warning at its grade crossings and the approaches to such crossings. It will ask the cooperation of cities and towns on its lines in maintaining the "approach" signs which the railroad will furnish.

A great movement is on, extending throughout the whole country, to have all "approach" and "crossing" signs and signals made uniform so that a man from California or Maine will know at once, wherever he sees them, that the signs, signals or lights he sees mean the same thing.

The whole question of the standardization of grade crossing signals and signs has been under consideration by railroad managers and members of public service and railroad commissions and it was on June 28 at Chicago that a joint committee representing the National Association of Railway Commissioners and the American Railway Association agreed upon seven important points and decided that "the time has come for the establishment of uniform methods of protecting all grade crossings of railroads."

The Boston & Albany Railroad has acted promptly in the matter of conforming to the decisions and recommendations of the joint committee. It has ordered materials necessary to equip grade crossings and crossing flagmen with the proposed metal discs; has ordered red lights to be displayed at night on all grade crossing gates and wherever warning lights at crossings are shown, which will necessitate the purchase of a number of new lights as many of the crossing tenders now use white lights for this purpose. It has also given instructions to have all gates painted in alternate black and white stripes.

The plans of the Boston & Albany R. R. regarding each of the seven recommendations on the joint committee are set forth in a statement made public by the company, as follows:

Approach Warning Signs

Article No. 1: That every grade crossing should be protected by an approach warning sign, to be placed in the highway at a distance not less than 300 feet on each side of the railroad tracks, the sign to be a circular disc not less than 24 inches in diameter painted white with a black border and black cross lines with the letters "R. R." Where deemed necessary this approach warning sign to be properly lighted at night.

The B. & A. will furnish these metal discs, free of cost, to cities and towns that will set them up on highways. These discs will be made to fit on posts and it is felt that it is fair to ask

APPOINTED DEPUTY

Mr. T. W. White Will Assist the New Supervisor of Administration

Mr. Thomas W. White of Boylston street, Newton Upper Falls, has accepted the position of first deputy under Hon. Charles E. Burbank, who has just been appointed Supervisor of Administration on Governor McCall. Mr. White was a member of the Commission of Economy and Efficiency which was also asked by the last Legislature when it created Mr. Burbank's position. Mr. White's salary as first deputy will be $4500, the same as that of his previous position.

MR. T. W. WHITE

Thomas Washington White was born in Newton Upper Falls, Jan. 19, 1876 the son of Daniel William and Hannah (Newton) White, both of whom emigrated from England. He was educated in the grammar and the high schools of Newton and the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy of Boston. He married Susan Cornelia Page of Boston on April 29, 1903. He has been in business for himself as a druggist from the age of twenty-one in one location in Newton. He also owns a store in Needham and is treasurer of the Maloney & White Company. He is a director of the Odd Fellows Building Association, a Mason (32nd degree), a member of the Odd Fellows, the A. O. U. W. and the Sons of St. George. His clubs are the Boston City and the Boston Press clubs, B. A. A. and the Newton Club. He was a member of the Newton Board of Aldermen from 1904 to 1909, and of the House of Representatives from 1910 to 1914 (chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee).

MIDSUMMER WEDDING

Miss Elizabeth Upham of Newtonville the bride of Mr. Milton A. Stevens of Enderby British Columbia

A society event of special note was the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Upham, the popular and talented daughter of Mrs. William P. Upham and the late William P. Upham, and Mr. Milton Alonzo Stevens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Stevens of Enderby, British Columbia, which took place Wednesday evening at Newtonville.

The Upham residence on Highland avenue was transformed into a veritable flower bower for the occasion and the surrounding lawns were beautifully illuminated. The rooms on the entire lower floor were beautifully decorated, a pink and white color motif being artistically carried out with carnations, asters and gladioli. In combination with palms, ferns and potted plants. The stair-case down which the bridal procession passed was festooned with asparagus fern interwoven with pale pink asters, and the pink and white blossoms were arranged with pleasing effect on mantles and fireplaces, and festoons of greenery were twined around the inverted lights.

Devoted to the ceremony itself was an alcove in the library with background of palms and greenery, and a floral arch of pink and white carnations, under which the bridal party stood. The ceremony was performed at quarter past seven by Rev. John Goddard, pastor of the Church of the New Jerusalem, of which the bride is an active member.

As the bridal party assembled, Mendelssohn's "Priests' March," from Athalia, was played by Mr. Joshua Phippen, formerly organist at Dr. Hale's Church, and a special friend of the family. He was accompanied on the violin by Miss Rosalind Kempton of Newtonville.

The bride was given in marriage by her cousin, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of Washington, D. C., and looked exceedingly charming, her natural attractions being enhanced by an exquisite wedding gown of white satin. She wore a bridal veil of point Venice, set off with pearl coronet and spray of lilies of the valley, and her bouquet was a magnificent full shower of white orchids, Bride roses, and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Austin H. Clark of Washington, D. C., the bride's sister, was matron of honor, and was beautifully gowned in shell pink satin with overdress of white lace, trimmed with pink rosebuds, and carried a bouquet of pink Killarney roses.

The bridesmaids, four attractive young society girls, intimate friends of the bride, included Miss Hazel Stevens of Enderby, B. C., sister of the bridegroom; Miss Dorothea Macomber of New York; Miss Margaret Edgerly of Lincoln, Mass., and Miss Sarah Hackett of Newtonville. They were gowned alike in pale pink satin with blue bodices and fluffy overdresses of white tulle, and carried bouquets of pink sweet peas and forget-me-nots, arranged with Baby's Breath.

Sarah Wendell Clark, the pretty little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin H. Clark, was the flower girl. She was very sweet and dainty in a pink satin frock, with overdress of white muslin and lace, and carried a basket of pink sweetheart rosebuds. She was accompanied by her brother, Master Jackson Clark, who was the ring bearer.

The bridegroom was assisted by Mr. Claire Hasek of Minneapolis, Minn., as groomsmen, and the ushers were Mr. Austin H. Clark of Washington, D. C., brother-in-law of the bride; Dr. Donald Macomber and Mr. Arthur Davis of West Newton; Mr. Monroe Peavey of Boston; Mr. Philip Davis of Cambridge, and Mr. Clinton B. Willey of Newtonville.

Following the ceremony a large and brilliant reception was held which was attended by a representative gathering of society from Washington, D. C., Boston, Brookline and the Newtons.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevens received from 8 until 10 o'clock, and were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Upham, the bride's mother, and Miss Hazel Stevens, sister of the bridegroom. The receiving line stood beneath a floral canopy of pink and white carnations, festooned with greenery and lighted by innumerable tiny incandescent globes, which scintillated with wondrous beautiful effect.

Mrs. Upham was very handsomely gowned in pearl colored taffeta with lace and chiffon trimmings, and carried a large spray of Richmond roses.

With a beautiful moonlight midsummer night, everything combined to make it an ideal wedding, and the occasion was most pleasurable for all present. The grounds were enclosed with canvas and the grassy lawns covered with rugs, and electric lights were hung the entire length extending to the summer house, where an elaborate wedding supper was served by Marshall, the caterer. The guests were served at small round tables placed on the lawn and the melodies from Knight's Orchestra, which furnished a delightful program during the reception, added greatly to the effectiveness of the gay and festive scene. After the reception the guests repaired to the dining room, where the bride cut the wedding cake. Miss Madeline Carter got the ring, and Miss Sarah Hackett the coin, which were hidden in the cake.

Justice Holmes gave a toast to the bride and bridegroom, and the bride's mother, and the guests drank to the health of the happy couple.

A large display of costly wedding gifts were on exhibition in the bride's music room on the second floor, among them being two beautiful imported lace luncheon sets, sent by friends in Europe.

The bride and bridegroom departed at a late hour amid a shower of rice, rose leaves and confetti. They will reside in Vancouver, British Columbia, where they will be at home after October 1st, at sixteen forty-one Collingwood street, Kitsilano.

The bride, who is a remarkably accomplished young lady, has been prominently identified with musical and dramatic circles in Boston and Newton. She is a member of the Players' Club.

EDITORIAL

The city government would strike a popular vein if it could see its way clear to make an appropriation for removal of lawn clippings from the small estates in the city. Householders who have less than a quarter acre of land are in a serious dilemma in disposing of the weekly accumulation of grass from their lawns. It is rare that there is any dumping place within easy reach and it is quite expensive to hire a team for its removal to more distant points. It would seem comparatively simple to allow the ash or waste teams to include this class of refuse and thus convenience many people.

The acceptance of the position of first deputy under the supervisor of administration by Mr. Thomas W. White of this city takes him out of a possible contest for the Republican nomination for Congress against Congressman William H. Carter of Needham.

The co-operative banks in this vicinity report a large amount of available funds for investment. Now is a splendid time for the prospective builder to obtain financial support in this direction.

The shortage in the paper supply has compelled us to use a different quality of paper in printing the Graphic.

The next president, Mr. Charles E. Hughes, is proving a 100% candidate as well as a 100% judge.

NORTH SHORE ROUTE

"On to Gloucester!" is a familiar shout at this time of year, and the famous fishing port is as attractive as ever. The sail down the harbor and along the north shore is delightful, and the trip is an easy and enjoyable one-day event. DEATH OF MRS. MERRILL

Mrs. Emma F. Merrill, widow of the late Richard E. Merrill, an old resident of Newtonville, passed away Wednesday at Clifton Heights, where she had been spending the summer. Mrs. Merrill is survived by two sons, Mr. William Merrill of Chicago and Mr. John Worcester Merrill of Newtonville, and one daughter, Miss Frances H. Merrill of Newtonville.

The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Newton Cemetery chapel.

BUYS BRICK BLOCK

Louis Fabian Bachrach, the Boston photographer, has purchased the brick block at number 314 Washington street, Newton, from the Worcester North Savings Institution. Mr. Bachrach plans to use the upper stories of the building for his various studios. The building is ideally arranged and situated for this work as there is light on all four sides, which is necessary for producing photographs. The deal was made for this through the office of John T. Burns Company.

POTTER—HAMILTON

The wedding of Miss Gladys Lillian Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Hamilton of 65 Ellis street, and Mr. Charles Allard Potter of Waltham street, West Newton, occurred last evening at the Second Baptist Church, Newton Upper Falls. The church was tastefully decorated with palms and potted plants. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by the Rev. Charles E. Eaton of Tremont Temple, Boston, the double ring service being used. The bride and groom were attended by a maid of honor, Miss Helen Strombom, and a brother of the groom, Mr. William A. Potter, was best man. The flower girl was Edith Elizabeth Raymond of Hampton Beach, N. H., and the ushers were Miss Mary Gormley of Cottage street, Miss Margaret Asbell, Miss Ursula McCarthy, and the Misses Margaret and Katherine Thornton of Newton Centre.

The bride was gowned in white silk, trimmed with silk lace and wore a bridal veil caught up with a spray of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Miss Gormley was dressed in light blue taffeta, Miss McCarthy in pink taffeta, Miss Margaret Asbell wore a gown of blue chiffon, Miss Margaret Thornton wore green crepe de chine over taffeta and Miss Katherine Thornton, white chiffon, trimmed with taffeta.

A reception followed immediately after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents on Ellis street. Mr. and Mrs. Potter were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Potter, parents of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Hamilton, parents of the bride, Miss Helen Strombom and Mr. William Potter. Guests were present from Gloucester, New York, Washington, D. C., Lowell and the Newtons.

Mr. and Mrs. Potter were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, among which were a chafing-dish, given by the Shemogue Club, of which Miss Hamilton is a member, and a leather Morris chair, given by a club of young men friends of the groom. Refreshments were served, after which the couple left for a wedding trip to New Brunswick, Canada. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Potter will reside at 75 Floral street, Newton Highlands, where they will be at home after Oct. 1.

STREET RAILWAY TRANSFERS

M. C. Brush, vice president of the Boston Elevated Railway Company recently related the facts showing the fraudulent use of transfers in his company's territory at a hearing before the Massachusetts Public Service Commission. His statement revealed a most amazing system of downright fraud, which astonished the members of the commission and others who heard it.

Mr. Brush said the company has 139 transfer points where paper transfers are given to passengers, and it issues approximately 100,000,000 free transfers in the course of a year. The number given at the rate of about 10 per cent annually. The company knows that it is acceptable to a number of fraudulently issued and fraudulently used free transfers every day; and it knows that it has no more right as a public service corporation to accept these transfers in lieu of fares than it has a right to accept lead nickels for fares, but it is absolutely helpless before the mass of transfers that it issues and receives. He declared that there is no man living who can devise a system by which the free transfer problem can be handled on any of the large street railway lines in this country so long as paper transfers are to be used. The Elevated Company could not hire a building in Boston large enough to house enough employees merely to examine the checks to see if they are correctly issued and correctly used. All that the company can do today is to take these free transfers and pocket its loss.

Not only are the transfers issued improperly by the conductors and accepted improperly by other conductors, but there are transfers issued by persons who have no right to issue them. Mr. Brush spoke of one liquor saloon where there was found a transfer pad and a punch, and a free transfer for a ride on the Elevated cars was issued with every drink. He said the company watched one instance at Northampton street the other day where five men went to the station for the purpose of going on the cars. One of them paid a nickel and went into the station. There he mixed with the crowd and then he went to the window and got a transfer check; then he went back into the crowd and turned around for another trip to the window where he got another free transfer. Thus he went back and forth until he had collected five transfer checks. Then he went out to his comrades, who were waiting for him, and they gave him a cent each for the transfers that he had collected and the five men boarded a car and rode for a cent apiece. One hundred and thirty boys have been arrested at the Dover street station recently for the fraudulent use of free transfers.

It has been impossible to tabulate the losses, but in a single instance of which the company is making a careful study of thousands of free transfers accepted by the company one day 64 per cent of them were incorrect as to destination. How many were correct as to time of issue, or date of use, or were issued by the right person the company has not been able to determine, but it is continuing its study.

So large is the free transfer business, that, according to Mr. Brush, it cannot be checked, but the company kept all the free transfers that were accepted on Nov. 29 and assigned a large force of clerks to study them. They have not got very far into the study yet, as there were received 340,000 checks that day, but they happened to take up first the checks accepted at Central Square, Cambridge. There were received at that station that day 4,808 checks, or transfers, from surface cars to the subway cars for Harvard Square. Of the 4,808 so accepted only 1,749 were so punched as properly to entitle the riders to ride in the direction of Harvard Square. In other words, only 36 per cent of them were correct as to destination. The others were for sixteen other points and 595 were "emergency" transfers, such as are issued by the company in cases of accidents when a car breaks down and the passengers have to be transferred to some other car. Mr. Brush said that at the particular point the legitimate call for "emergency" transfers is practically nothing. Of the 11,554 free transfers that were accepted at the same station that day for the opposite direction, Boston-bound, only 9,564 would legally entitle the holders to ride toward Boston on them, and they have been carefully inspected. The others were for twenty-one different points.

This shows that 5,049 of the free transfers accepted by the Elevated at the Central Square station alone in one day were not properly acceptable as fare on account of the destination punched on them, and how many were accepted in other respects the company has not determined. How many of them were improper as to the hour of usage, indicating that they might have been improperly used for stop-over purposes and probably for the home-trip for the same nickel that was paid for the trip to work in the morning can never be determined.

Some conductors are issuing transfers to persons who are not entitled to have them, and are issuing them for illegal trips, but whether they are so issuing them in ignorance, carelessness or with intent the company cannot attempt to prove in all cases; and the conductors who accept those transfers have not time to examine them with sufficient care to decide if they are legal. Mr. Brush contended that it is a physical impossibility for the clerks at the transfer points to examine the checks carefully. At Central Square, for instance, about 14,000,000 are handled in the course of a year; at Northampton street, 7,400,000; at Dover street, 7,000,000; at Brookline Village, 5,082,000; at Massachusetts avenue, 4,800,000; at Kendall Square, 4,800,000; at Dorchester avenue, 4,703,000, and at Dudley street about 57,000,000.

The significance of this situation, as Mr. Brush explained it, is that the Boston Elevated, like every other large street railway company in the country, will have to get away as far as possible from the paper transfer system, and establish prepayment areas where passengers can transfer from one car to another without the use of a check.

When You Become a "Conscious" Reader of Advertising

By J. R. HAMILTON
Former Advertising Manager of Wanamaker's, Philadelphia

When you learn to read your advertising as you read your news, the cost of everything you wear or use is going to be lowered for you.

If you knew how much money it takes to soak an idea into your mind subconsciously you would be ashamed of your mind. It actually takes as long as two years sometimes to get you to think and say a certain word.

It's like teaching a baby to talk.

Every known trick of psychology is brought to bear on you. Advertisers have even been known to print their advertisement upside down, hoping, perhaps, that if you had to stand on your head to read it you might remember what they say.

And what you so often refuse to receive with your will the camera of your eye records in spite of you. So that 96% of what you buy you buy through advertising whether you know it or not.

And yet, in the face of all this, the advertising method of selling things is twenty times cheaper than any other method known.

Think how much cheaper still it would be if you would only read your advertising consciously instead of buying through it in spite of yourself.

The merchant who doesn't advertise hasn't even a chance with the one who does.

Your eye is taking photographs every time you turn these pages. You couldn't get away from these advertisements if you tried. Even the man who claims not to see them at all is recording them all the time. Every merchant who appears here is telling you his story every day whether you know it or not.

All we are trying to do is to make you conscious readers of advertising instead of subconscious readers. This is being done equally for your benefit and for ours.

Every time you look for the advertising in this paper instead of making it look for you you bring down your cost of living, you increase the buying power of your money and you get a better quality for the price. This is true because the men who advertise are always the best merchants. They are the ones who last. The others flicker up for a little while and then go out. That's the proof.

On the other hand, every time we get a hundred more of our readers to turn each day with a conscious mind to the advertising news as well as to the general news, we make this a better medium for our advertisers. We give them more for their money because we give them your will.

And before we are through every subscriber we have will be reading his advertising consciously day by day—never fear. For this is another psychological law.

NEWTON 25 YEARS AGO

From the Newton Graphic of August 21, 1891

Simpson Bros. have greatly improved the bank square by some wide crossings.

Death on August 18 of Mrs. Gilman Brackett.

400 Italian laborers employed on sewer work struck on account of failure of the contractor to pay wages due them.

The fence removed from around the City Hall lot.

"There is great rejoicing over the fact that the school house clock (Newton Centre) struck the hours yesterday from 11 A. M. onward and there are hopes that this new feature will become permanent."

REAL ESTATE NOTES

The sale is reported of the property situated at 223 Park street, Newton, for Mr. Walter L. Smith of Lexington, to A. Dudley Dowd of Newton. The property consists of a large dwelling and 33,000 sq. ft. of land, all valued at $12,000.

A lot of land situated at the corner of Hunnewell avenue and Breamore road has been sold for Bessie A. Barney to Nellie B. Wolcott of Newton. The lot contains 6882 sq. ft. and a single house will be erected thereon for the occupancy of the owner.

Final papers have gone on record transferring the properties Nos. 101-103, Abbottsford road and Nos. 9-11 Chapin road, Brookline, from Fred H. Seales to M. A. Wise of Newton, who buys for investment. The houses are modern stucco, two-family dwellings and are valued at $30,000.

Two stucco, duplex houses and 10,000 sq. ft. of land at Nos. 87-89 and 91-93 Abbottsford road, Brookline have been sold by Fred H. Seales to Walter L. Smith of Lexington who buys for investment. Properties are valued at $30,000.

Robert T. Russell of Melrose has bought of Wm. M. Ambler the property at 29 Vernon street, Newton, consisting of a large mansion house and 25,000 sq. ft. of land, all valued by the assessors at $12,500.

For M. A. Wise the property known as 103 Prince street, West Newton, to A. Dudley Dowd of Newton. The property consists of a large single house and 15,118 sq. ft. of land and is assessed for $11,500.

Edmonds and Byfield were the brokers in all the above transactions.

PRETTY GIRLS AND OTHERS

After All, the One Who is "Nice" is Apt to Be the Most Popular With Everybody.

We all know the old joke of the pretty girl who is presented as saying to the homely girl, "It's too bad not to be good-looking, isn't it?" and the homely girl's response: "Yes, because one has to be nice, and that's hard; did you every try it?"

Of course we enjoy the reply, especially as we know how much greater the impression that is made by being nice, the Milwaukee Journal observes. The pretty girl who doesn't think this necessary is away behind the homely girl who has really learned to be what we describe so satisfactorily and indefinitely by the word "nice."

But do we ever think of this as one of the definite accomplishments of life that can be acquired, not so easily perhaps as a knowledge of algebra or history, but just as surely? Every day we meet someone, often several persons, whose lives exemplify the beauty of being nice. Very soon we learn to know them and we are ready almost without thinking to go a little out of the way to see that we do meet them.

They are not all homely girls; some of them are pretty, and many of them aren't girls at all. Most of them always seem to be "nice" by nature. But anyone with an atom of justice in his reasoning knows that at some time and probably often, there has come to these persons who make life brighter the question, "Does it pay?" Maybe they never really proved that it did.

That doesn't matter so much, for they have kept on with the cheery look, the pleasant greeting, the friendliness and graciousness that are the world's greatest joy bringers. And that is enough to make them far better remembered and far more beloved than if they had been named the reigning beauties of their day.

LAZIEST OF ALL THE BIRDS

Feathered "Weary Willie" Sleeps All Day and Absolutely Refuses to Go After Food.

Laizest of birds is the frogmouth. He sleeps all day, and instead of flying about in search of food he sits still on a limb and literally waits for the insects to come and feed him. He's such a sound sleeper that you can knock him off his perch with a club and he'll not wake up. He inhabits the islands of the Indian ocean and Australia.

He's about the size of the whippoorwill and gets his name from his wide mouth, which also serves as his insect trap. Too lazy to fly for his food, like other birds, he crawls along the limb of a tree, opening his wide mouth and snapping it shut, catching what flies and gnats come within his range.

At night he's found perched with his mate on the roofs of houses, on fences or stumps. Only after the sun goes down does he show any inclination to move about. All day he sits, feet glued to the limb of a gum tree, indifferent to rain, tropical sun or the call of the woods.

One species of frogmouth has tufts of hair rising from the top of his head like ears.

Birds Cannot Understand Glass.

It has been frequently noticed that no wild bird can understand the properties of glass, and great numbers, ranging in size from a pheasant to a titmouse, are killed by flying against the windows of country houses.

If a room possesses a large mirror reflecting the view seen through an open window birds are particularly liable to be deceived, and especially if frightened into thinking that they can fly through it.

Sparrow hawks will sometimes chase their intended victims into strange places. Some years ago a member of this species pursued a small bird through the open window of a railway carriage in motion. In its blind determination to secure the panting fugitive it entangled its claws in the meshes of the hat rack and was ignominiously slain by an astonished passenger with an umbrella.

Before and After.

The members of the club were telling yarns when a quiet man in the corner was asked to contribute.

"Well," said he, "I once entered a restaurant where they weigh you before eating and then after eating, and then charge you by weight. I got a good feed and was charged five shillings. The next time I went I took in my pocket bricks, weights, old iron and such like. I was weighed and then went upstairs and had a banquet three times as big as the last. After getting rid of the ballast I went down and was weighed again, but they couldn't make it out."

He paused.

"Couldn't make what out?" asked the club members.

"Why," answered the quiet man, "they owed me four-and-tuppence."—London Tit-Bits.

Poor Hubby.

The young bride was doing the family marketing for the first time. She stopped at the fish stall and looked over the array of sea food.

"All perfectly fresh, mam'am," said the dealer, ingratiatingly.

"Oh, dear," exclaimed the bride. "That's what everybody says. I wish I could find some stale fish. You see, my husband has indigestion, and the doctor won't even let him eat fresh bread. I'm sure fresh fish would be even worse for him."

KNEW WHERE "HE WAS AT"

Possum, However, Was Unable to Tell of His Whereabouts, to Employer Over the Phone.

When the late Robert Aull was park commissioner there was a negro boy called Possum who helped around the boathouse in Forest Park lake. Possum was a mighty hunter and fisherman, and those qualities appealed to Colonel Aull. Sometimes Colonel Aull and Possum took lanterns at night and caught a mess of frogs in Forest Park.

Possum had a falsetto voice and a vast ignorance of how to use the telephone. He had located several fat, fine frogs that he thought Colonel Aull might like to gig and he called him up at the city hall.

The commissioner's stenographer answered the telephone and after hearing Possum's shrill tenor demanding an interview with "Mistah Aull," she said: "There's a lady on the phone who wants to speak to you personally."

Colonel Aull went to the telephone and said: "Well, this is Mr. Aull; what is it, madame?"

The reply came: "Thith ith Pothum! I want to talk to Mithta Aull."

"This is Mr. Aull. Who are you?"

"Thith ith Pothum. Don't you know Pothum? Pothum, the nigger out at Foreth Park. I want you to come and meet me, and we'll get thome frawgth."

"O, all right, Possum. Where are you?"

"Thuh?"

"Where are you?"

"I don't know what you thaid, Thith ith Pothum. I want you to come right out and meet me."

"All right, I'll come, but where are you?"

"I don't know what you thaid."

Then the park commissioner, raising his voice, resorted to the language of the plain people: "Where are you at?"

"O," responded Possum, with a sigh of relief. "Heah I ith."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

JAVA IN HELPLESS STATE

People of Tropical Garden of the World Are Without Ambition to Advance.

The garden par excellence of the tropic world is Java, yet intellectually it is but a cemetery of withered hopes and ambitions wrecked in mockery, for over all there broods the dull fatalism of despair—the "sufficient unto the day" of the conquered follower of Mohammed. Ambition, if it exists in the Java of today, seems powerless to raise its people above the condition of the Asiatic peasant. Dr. Alfred G. Mayor writes in the Scientific Monthly: "There is no well-to-do class of native artisans, and one may travel throughout the land and find hardly a native shop upon whose wares the European may bestow a glance of admiration, save only for the vanishing art of batik cloth, and the still more moribund manufacture of the Krees.

Antlike over the whole land, in every view, there swarms the full-faced, docile coolie of the soil. Measured by standards of mortality, a source of commercial weakness, and Java has not always "paid," despite her conquerors' efforts to secure as much profit from her as their conscience and the public spirit of their times would permit. The water supply of her countless mountain streams might turn the wheels of many a mill, but Java still sends her produce abroad in the form of raw materials, and the cultivation of cotton is not even attempted.

His Explanation.

The streets were crowded with idle miners and the city authorities, taking advantage of the fact, had a good amount of work done putting in sewers, paving streets, etc.

Mulligan, who was not above earning a little extra money whenever possible, had taken over a job at digging ditches.

One morning his friend chanced to pass him as he was laboring shoveling earth.

"Hallo, Mulligan! What are yez doin' there?"

The workman leaned on his spade and made a long pause before answering:

Not Creatures of the Sea.

The National museum at Washington, contains a notable display of the bones of several species of extinct mammals which, if seen alive in the ocean, would be called huge sea serpents. They were carnivorous and their long, slender jaws were armed with formidable teeth. Although a few remaining individuals of the group may have given actual basis for the sea-serpent stories, these extinct animals were not reptiles, but mammals which, like the whale and seal and other, had happened to evolve in an aquatic environment.

Not Such a Fool.

"Here's a strange case," said Mrs. Spotter to her husband. "A man they called the town fool up in New Hampshire died, and they weighed his brain. It was heavier than the average."

"Is that all it says about him?"

"Yes—except that he was for many years entirely dependent on well-to-do relatives."

"Huh—he was no fool. If you have well-to-do relatives, why use your brains?"

rapid movement of the glacier's middle than its edges; for glaciers, again like rivers of water, develop swifter currents nearer mid-stream.
Professor Le Conte tells us that the movement of Nisqually Glacier in summer averages, at mid-stream, about sixteen inches a day. It is far less at the margins, its speed being retarded by the friction of the sides.

It is one of the great pleasures of a visit to Mount Rainier National Park to wander over the fields of snow and climb out on the Nisqually Glacier and explore its crevasses and ice caves.
Like all glaciers, the Nisqually gathers on its surface masses of rock with which it strews its sides just as rivers of water strew their banks with logs and floating debris. These are called lateral moraines, or side moraines. Sometimes glaciers build lateral moraines miles long and over a thousand feet high, as you will see when you visit the Rocky Mountain National Park.

The rocks which are carried in mid-stream to the end of the glacier and dropped when the ice melts are called the medial or middle moraine.

The end, or snout, of the glacier thus always lies among a great mass of rocks and stones. The Nisqually River flows from a cave in the end of the Nisqually Glacier's snout, for the melting begins miles up stream under the glacier. The river is milky white when it first appears because it carries sediment and powdered rock, which, however, it soon deposits, becoming quite clear.

There are many glaciers as large and larger than the Nisqually, but they are little known because so hard to reach. When the Department of the Interior opens roads to the other sides and a road all around the great ice mountain all of these will become easily accessible to visitors.

Many interesting things might be told of these glaciers were there space. For example, several species of minute insects live in the ice, hopping about like tiny fleas. They are harder to see than the so-called sand fleas at the sea shore because much smaller. Slender, dark brown worms live in countless millions in the surface ice. Microscopic rose-colored plants also thrive in such great numbers that they tint the surface here and there, making what is commonly called "red snow."

But this brief picture of the Mount Rainier National Park would miss its loveliest touch without some notice of the wild flower parks lying at its base, and often reaching far up between the icy fingers, of Mount Rainier. Paradise Valley, Henrys Hunting Ground, Spray Park, Summerland—such are the names given to some of these beauty spots.

Let John Muir, the celebrated naturalist, describe them here.
"Above the forests," he writes, "there is a zone of the loveliest flowers, fifty miles in circuit, and nearly two miles wide, so closely planted and so luxuriant that it seems as if nature, glad to make an open space between woods so dense and ice so deep, were economizing the precious ground and trying to see how many of her darlings she can get together in one mountain wreath—daisies, anemones, columbine, erythroniums, larkspurs, etc., among which we wade knee-deep and waist-deep, the bright corollas in myriads touching petal to petal. Altogether this is the richest subalpine garden I have ever found, a perfect flower elysium."

the cities and towns to bear part of the expense. The discs which the railroad will provide are to cost $1.50 each. It is estimated that a post to hold one of these discs will cost 25 cents and an effort will be made to get the different communities to provide these posts and defray the small cost of setting them up and maintaining them.

At the meeting of the joint committee this recommendation was regarded as one of the two great things to be secured. The need of a cautionary approach signal has been felt for some time, and attention was called to the fact that the State of New Hampshire now has a law requiring such signs to be maintained. Mr. C. L. Bardo, General Manager of the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R., was the New England representative of the joint committee of eight men.

Article No. 2: That the railroad companies maintain, within the limits of their rights of way, proper cautionary signs such as are now in use or authorized by law, and where deemed necessary such signs shall be equipped with a red light at night.

The B. & A. believes that it is now complying with this recommendation. The signs which it now maintains on its right of way are such as are required by Massachusetts and New York.

Red Lights at All Crossings

Article No. 3: That all lights displayed at night towards the highway at grade crossings shall be red.

This will be done on the B. & A. All its gates at grade crossings are to be equipped with red lights. These will be specially made lanterns, the order for which has already been sent out by the purchasing agent of the B. & A., which will show red to persons approaching the railroad track but will show white to the locomotive engineer. Wherever crossing tenders show lights or wherever lights are located at grade crossings they will be red hereafter, and this will be a change as in many cases white lights are now used for this purpose.

The agreement that the red light was the proper color was unanimous in the committee, and Mr. James B. Walker of New York, Secretary of the New York Public Service Commission, one of the members, in speaking on this subject, said:

"The railroads have been in the business for years, and they have adopted certain systems of signals; red light means danger. It seems to me you could apply those same signals here. Educate the people when they see red it means danger, stop."

In commenting upon the use of red light a writer in the Railway Age Gazette says:

"Red is nearly or quite universal as a night warning in city streets, and in no detail is uniformly more desirable than in this matter of a warning light. Red is called by scientific men the most 'arrestive' color."

New "STOP" Signs for Use in Day Time
Article No. 4: That all grade crossing flagmen use during the day a uniform disc 16 inches in diameter painted white with a black border and the word "STOP" painted thereon in black letters about 5 inches high instead of the vari-colored flags which are now being used.

Instructions to purchase these discs have been issued and all crossing flagmen on the Boston & Albany R. R. will be equipped with them as soon as they can be procured.

Mr. J. A. McCrea, of New York, General Manager of the Long Island R. R., a member of the committee, said regarding the proper use of the "STOP" sign with black letters on a white field, that various roads had experimented with different colored letters, some of which the word "Stop" was painted with white letters. He believed it could be demonstrated, and the committee subsequently agreed with him, that the black letters on a white background could be seen better than on any other sign and the committee was in entire accord in agreeing that the use of this disc was very much to be preferred to the different colored flags.

Barber Pole Gates

Article No. 5: The uniform painting of all crossing gates with alternate diagonal stripes of black and white.

Orders to paint all grade crossing gates on the B. & A. after the style proposed in this recommendation have been given, and the order provides that if extra men are needed for the job they are to be employed.

The visibility of a gate painted with alternate black and white stripes is greatly increased, as has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of railroad managers, and Mr. McCrea calls attention to the fact that it is an old custom in Europe that "our experiments have proved beyond any doubt that this barber pole painting makes the gates stand out."

Article No. 6: That the railroad companies, wherever practicable, be required to maintain their property at grade crossings free of obstructions to vision; also that the highway approaches to crossings shall be so graded that the free passage of vehicles shall not be impeded.

The B. & A. feels that it has complied with this recommendation along its lines. Mr. Bardo spoke no doubt from experience, when he said, on this matter:

"Some of our bad places are in towns where it is almost impossible for the railroad to consider anything which would involve their undertaking to clear up and give an uninterrupted view of their tracks in either direction. Many of these places are old homes, and unless you know the spirit of the average New Englander you cannot appreciate how he opposes touching anything on his property."

Article No. 7: That the National Association of Railway Commissioners, the American Railway Association, and the American Automobile Association, consider the advisability of agreeing upon whatever legislation may be necessary in the several states to make thoroughly effective the protection of grade crossings; and that it is our opinion that a uniform law requiring vehicles approaching such a crossing to reduce speed to a safe limit at the warning approach sign is advisable.

Regarding this recommendation the Boston & Albany R. R. expresses its entire sympathy with the movement toward securing uniform protection of grade crossings.

An important feature of the whole movement toward securing this legislation is that the American Automobile Association is in conference with a committee of the National Association of Railway Commissioners and the committee of the American Railway Association. As one writer has pointed out the 8 men representing these two latter associations are really acting for one hundred million people, which is, he says, "a rather unusual occurrence, except in the halls of Congress." The Railway Age Gazette says of the report of the Committee, and the seven points which it took up: "These representatives are particularly well situated to influence the right persons and to do whatever may be necessary to convert their good resolutions into actual accomplishment. This is a comparatively new problem, and it is highly desirable to secure uniform action throughout the United States, for the automobile and other improvements are constantly tending to make the whole country a single neighborhood. Moreover, the duty of the state railroad commissioners to guide and instruct their respective legislatures—a particularly plain and important duty in this case—is one which demands quick action all around."

Canes of Rhinoceros Horn.

Probably some of the most expensive canes to manufacture are those from rhinoceros horns. Such a cane, when made of one piece of horn, often costs as high as $500. The high price is due to the expert treatment which the rhinoceros horn requires immediately after the beast has been slain.

"Busy" or "Don't Answer?"

WHEN THE OPERATOR REPORTS THAT "THE LINE IS BUSY," It is because she has taken the time to test the line called for. It would be easier for her to complete the connection than to make such a report. If the operator did not test on every call, she might plug in on a busy line.

Furthermore, "Busy" means that the line (not necessarily the telephone number you have called) is in use. The subscriber on a four-party line may not be talking, but one of the three other subscribers may be, making the entire line closed to traffic, or some one of the party subscribers may have put in a toll call and the line is being held awaiting its completion. Lengthy conversations on unimportant matters often congest party lines and give cause for protests from other subscribers in common.

WHEN THE OPERATOR REPORTS "THEY DON'T ANSWER," she has done all within her means to compel an answer to her summons. That summoning power is the ringing of a bell, a mechanical signal which says, "Someone desires to speak to you." It remains with the person called to be prompt in responding.

If a subscriber is slow in responding, the calling person may hang up the receiver assuming that the former is inaccessible. Then there is an additional inconvenience to the called person when the operator reports, "There is no one on the line now, please excuse it." The operator who makes that report usually is located at a different switchboard than the operator who rang the bell, and is unable to ascertain where the call originated.

The KITCHEN CABINET

In all human affairs there are efforts, and there are results and the strength of the effort is the measure of the result.—James Allen.

Resolve to be thyself; and know that he who finds himself, loses his misery.—Matthew Arnold.

SPECIAL DISHES FOR INVALIDS.

When beef tea is needed in a hurry broil a slice of round steak for a minute on each side, lay on a deep plate and score very closely, cutting half way through. Turn and score on the other side at right angles. Pour over hot water to half cover the meat and set in a warm place and turn the meat often, press in with a fork until it begins to look white. Squeeze the meat dry in a meat press and salt to taste. Serve either hot or cold. If reheated take great care not to coagulate the albumen.

Bread Gruel.—Simmer a cupful of bread crumbs in a pint of water until all absorbed. Rub through a strainer, season lightly with salt and serve hot or cold. For variety brown the crumbs first, and flavor with beef essence or reduce the water to one cupful and add one-half a cupful of cream.

Farina Porridge.—Take two tablespoonfuls of farina, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, a cupful of boiling water and a cupful of milk. Sift the farina into the boiling, salted water and cook till it thickens; then add the milk, beating smooth, and cook in a double boiler 15 minutes.

Koumiss.—Dissolve half a yeast cake in half a cupful of tepid water, mix it with a quart of milk, as fresh as possible; add a tablespoonful of sugar, and when well mixed put in bottles and tie the corks in with stout cords. Let stand 12 hours at a temperature of 75 degrees, then place on ice or turn the bottles upside down until wanted. A champagne tap is convenient to draw the koumiss, but if care is used when opening the bottle, enough may be saved to refresh the patient after decorating the walls and furniture, not to mention yourself. Do not make more than enough to last two or three days.

Norwegian Rice.—Cook rice tender; then reheat in well-seasoned chicken stock. Put on a platter; sprinkle with chopped chicken liver, scrambled eggs and grated cheese.

Nowhere is the sky so blue, the grass so green, the sunshine so bright, the shade so welcome, as right here, now, today. No other blue sky nor bright sunshine, nor welcome shade exists for you. Other skies are bright to others. They have been bright in the past and so they will be bright again, but yours are here and now.—David Starr Jordan.

ECONOMICAL MEAT DISHES.

There are many cooks who do not appreciate the value of calf's hearts.

Two hearts carefully washed and all the waste removed, can be cooked in boiling water to cover, adding such seasoning as is enjoyed, then slice and serve hot or cold. Calf's liver larded with salt pork or bacon and baked is another delicious dish, easy to prepare and leaving no waste.

Braised Liver.—Make a dressing of one-half a cupful of finely chopped suet, one cupful of bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of sweet herbs, a little grated lemon rind, and salt and pepper to taste. Mix well and set aside while preparing the meat. Cut calf's liver in slices, not too thin, and roll each in flour, salt and pepper. Lay thin slices of salt pork in the bottom of a baking dish and put the liver on top of them with dressing. Add water or stock to moisten and cover the dish closely. Cook in the oven an hour. Serve in the dish in which it was cooked.

Beefsteak Pie.—Cut left-over broiled steak in one-inch pieces. Cover with stock made from beef extract, using a half a teaspoonful to a cupful of boiling water. Add one small onion sliced, and cook slowly until the beef is tender. Remove the onion and make a sauce of the strained liquid, seasoning with salt and pepper; add a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Add two cupfuls of potatoes, cut in half-inch cubes, previously parboiled for five minutes in salted water. Turn this mixture into a deep earthen dish and cover with rich biscuit dough, either in the form of biscuit or a cover, with an opening to allow the steam to escape. Mashed potato brushed with egg may also be used, which will take less time for the baking.

Chopped lamb seasoned with chopped green pepper and made into croquettes is a dish that is well liked. Serve with a sauce and chopped pepper as a garnish.

The budget is to the housekeeper what the blue print is to the builder. The average housekeeper may reduce expenditure by keeping accounts each month of amounts spent for various food products.

HELPFUL HINTS.

In the first place every home keeper should keep accounts. Do you know any successful business man who keeps no account of his income and outgo? He is just as rare as is the housekeeper who does record her daily expenditures. Since the cost of living is constantly advancing it is vitally necessary that deep concern be paid to reducing certain items of expenditure. Food for the family costs more than any other item, and those who work with the thriftless and improvident know that their condition is largely a matter of what they spend for the inside rather than the outside of the body.

Since meat makes up a large part of the ordinary family diet, any economy in the purchase of it will make a noticeable reduction in the food bill. By using meat substitutes, which are less expensive, but as nutritious, the amount may be cut down by half. The use of cheese, which is rich in protein, a pound of cheese being equal to two pounds of meat in food value with much less waste, will prove most satisfactory.

It is a great advantage to market in person; she sees the food products, is able to furnish variety and if she has strength of mind enough to refuse to buy that which she knows she cannot afford, no matter how alluring, she will find her marketing profitable. The butcher will not give short weight with the customer looking on, though the difference may be small it amounts to much in the course of a year.

The utilizing of left-overs in the planning of the meals is another important item. It goes without saying that the economical housewife makes out her menu days ahead in order to save expense and use those left-overs profitably.

Fruit and vegetables lend themselves to all sorts of combinations. As soups and salads they are satisfactory.

Something is wrong with everything. We live upon the planet of mistakes. Most of us are misfits. The rest are excuses. I know of no ideal condition except the condition of someone else. No human being ever had things just exactly to suit him. The sooner we awake to this truth and make up our minds that if ever we are to find contentment at all, it will be among things as they are and not among things as they ought to be, the better it will be for us—and also for the unfortunate people who have to live with us.—Frank Crane.

DAY WITH PANCAKES.

If pancakes are to be light, more mixing will not do. The batter must be thoroughly beaten for five or ten minutes. The frying pan should be very smooth and fairly hot so the cakes may cook quickly without getting soggy.

Plain Pancakes.—Sift one cupful of flour into a basin; add a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, one unbeaten egg, and half a cupful of milk. Mix until smooth, then begin to beat with a wooden spoon for a few minutes; then add another half cupful of milk and continue beating until air bubbles rise to the top. Fry on a hot griddle and serve with lemon juice and sugar.

Rice Pancakes.—Boil a quarter of a pound of rice until quite soft, then drain. Mix with it one cupful of cream, four well beaten eggs, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, nutmeg to taste, a half cupful of melted butter and sufficient flour to form a smooth batter. Fry and serve.

Serving a thin slice of orange sprinkled with sugar on the nice brown cake, which is but little larger than the orange is a most attractive and delicious cake.

Scotch Pancakes.—Beat four eggs with four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Have six tablespoonfuls of flour and a pint of sweet milk, mix a little of the milk with the flour until smooth, add this to the beaten eggs, then add a little salt and mix all together. Put a tablespoonful of butter on a smooth griddle and pour a cupful of the well beaten batter on to the pan, cook until well browned, then spread with butter and orange marmalade, roll up, sprinkle with sugar, serve on a hot dish.

Chopped pineapple or other fruits may be served on these cakes, even grated chocolate added just as they are taken from the griddle, dusted with sugar, is a cake liked very much.

POLITICAL NOTES

Renomination papers duly certified and containing more than the two hundred and fifty names required for Hon. Henry C. Mulligan of Natick, the present member of the Governor's Council from the Sixth Councillor District, were filed with the Secretary of State last Saturday. Other papers for Councillor Mulligan which are now in circulation will be filed this week. An active campaign in his behalf is being conducted by his many friends throughout the district.

The Cook Cook.

Edith Wharton, the novelist, was talking about French housekeeping. "The one drawback," she said, "is that your cook does your marketing. She markets for cash, too. The result is a very frank kind of cheating. I said once to a cook in Paris: 'Now, if you are strictly honest, I'll give you five francs extra at each month's end. What do you say?' The cook hesitated, then she answered: 'I'll think it over carefully, madam, and let you know my decision this evening.'"

 —Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Warren motored from Squirrel Island to Bath, Maine, this week, and were guests of Mr. Reginald Wright Kauffman, at his summer home.
 —Mr. and Mrs. John W. Allen of Jefferson street are taking an automobile trip through Maine. They will attend the one hundredth anniversary of the town of Kingfield, Mr. Allen's native place.
 —Miss Margaret Cutler has left Hyannisport for a brief visit to Canada, taking with her a number of her Farmington school friends who will spend their time with her, returning in September.
 —Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dwight Corey of Farlow Hill returned Wednesday from Casco Bay, Maine, where they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Soule at their summer home at Little Bunting Island.
 —Mrs. Sydney Harwood of Waverley avenue entertained the members of the Duxbury Garden Club at luncheon on Wednesday at her summer home at Powder Point. Mrs. King read an interesting paper on "Small Fruits."
 —Mr. and Mrs. Charles Marshall Boyd were among those who entertained at dinner before the mid-summer ball at The Tedesco Club, Wednesday evening, which was the big social event of the Swampscott last week.
 —Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Holbrook of Waverley avenue entertained their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Holbrook, over the week-end at "Meadow Lodge," their summer home at Smith's Point, Manchester-by-the-Sea.
 —Mr. and Mrs. George A. Kinley and Miss Marguerite Kinley of Newtonville avenue have returned from a motor trip to South Poland, Maine, where they were guests at the Poland Spring House, and Portsmouth N. H., where they were guests at The Wentworth.
 —Mr. A. DeW. Sampson of St. James street has recently returned from an automobile trip thru New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine. At Burlington on Lake Champlain he met his grandsons, Parker B. and Bradford S. Field, who were among the juniors from Massachusetts at the Plattsburgh training camp. They report the military discipline as beneficial and enjoyable, though somewhat strenuous for novices, and expect to enjoy their well earned rest at their summer home in Bethel, Maine.

MYRA AND MATRIMONY

By NEIL LANGSHAW.

Myra Lovelace looked the letter all over before she thought of opening it. To her astonishment, she was told that she had drawn the lucky number for the automobile at the fair, and the slip was a blue command to a certain bank to pay her a thousand dollars in cash should she desire the money instead of the car.

"Kitty, Kitty—oh, Kitty!" she cried excitedly. When she remembered that Kitty was away visiting Bob's mother, Kitty was going to marry Bob, when he could afford it.

That was what Charlie had said to her long ago. At first, she didn't mind it—his long absence and unsatisfactory letters, that spoke only vaguely of their prospective wedding.

She had laid the check and letter on the kitchen table.

In the hall was an old-fashioned mirror. In passing, she caught a glimpse of herself. She went back, stopped and faced the glass squarely.

"Now, Myra Lovelace," she said to it, "let us see what you look like since you have inherited a fortune." She stood a minute with compressed lips, appraising herself. Then she lifted her hands to her temples where the golden hair was fading and thinning, pulled down a loop on each side and fastened them with pins. Then she rubbed her cheeks hard. She was going to "match the cherries," as Charlie used to say, if it took the skin off. She was surprised at the result.

She looked farther. Her eyes were all right. Excitement had brightened them. Why, she was still pretty, very pretty—and rich! Surely if Charlie could see her now he wouldn't stay in the West—or at least he would make some definite suggestion about their wedding day.

Her eyes went down. The glass, not very large, reflected only part of her blue calico dress, made plain and narrow across the chest and just now stuck full of pins. She took out the pins and tried to pull some looseness into the front. It was no use.

One thousand dollars! With a thousand dollars she could buy dresses, soft, exquisite, lacy and fine, such as she had seen on the daughters of Congressman Hodge when they came home in the summer. And lovely shoes that were all curves, and silk stockings to match. And hats large and small she pictured in the steam of the teakettle. Big gauzy ones, with a single rose, right underneath next the hair, and tiny black velvet ones with a band of jet. Black velvet she knew would look well on her. And the cloaks. Such wonders she had seen in Mrs. Purdum's fashion book!

A thousand dollars! She would like a wrist watch and a gold mesh bag and something for around the neck. She knew it was still smooth and white beneath the calico. And there would be clinging silken underthings, delicate shaded and wonderful feeling. And gloves and veils.

She rose. Charlie's last letter, months old, was in the paper wallet in the sitting room. She got it and looked at the address. She thought of an uncle in the same town! Then she made up her mind to do something!

It was long past dinner-time, but she sat down to write a letter! That done, she hunted up a schedule of city trains, made out a list, pressed out her white waist and got everything ready for a day of shopping in town. If Charlie had forgotten how attractive she was, she would remind him!

Then she drank some tea, lay down and started to redream all the visions of her girlhood.

But she heard wheels, then Kitty's voice: "Auntie! Auntie Myra, where are you?"

"Here, dear. I wasn't expecting you so soon. Why, what's the matter?" Kitty was sobbing softly.

"Bob's here! He came over to say good-by to you. He is going West. Oh, auntie, a—a man they know wants him to start right away. There is—a good chance open and he must not even wait a day. And he's going tonight! If he had the money to put into the store here, they'd take him into partnership and he would stay and we would be married. But there's no chance, he says, and he's going. I'll never—never see him again."

Myra patted the heaving shoulders and smoothed the soft head on her breast.

"Dearie, don't cry! Listen to me! I—I've had some luck, Kitty. The fair people sent me a thousand dollars. I had the winning number. And I was just wondering what I should do with it. Do you think I could persuade Bob to take it as a wedding present? I can't think of anything better, can you?"

"Aunt Myra—why—you—" Kitty's eyes were big. Then she rushed for the door. "Bob—oh, Bob, what do you think—"

The rest was lost, for Myra had slipped to the kitchen and dropped a newly written letter and a list into the coals.

And as she did so she looked wistfully out of the window—and saw Charlie, the Charlie of her dreams, coming up the path!

"Myra! He was standing in the doorway now. Myra, girl, you're prettier than ever! Do you think you can still care a little for your old beau?"

"Why, Charlie," she cried happily. "If you'd stayed away another second I'd have died!"

BETTY'S BROKEN RESOLVE

By CATHERINE CRANMER.

"I'll tell you, sis, you'd better not try Markham too severely, or you'll drive off an 'a number one' matrimonial chance."

"Pshaw, Jack! Aren't there plenty more fish in the sea?"

"Not plenty of Markham's kind."

"You are evidently of one mind with him, for it's because he is so sure that he can't be wrong about anything that I've been keeping him on the anxious seat."

"Take it from me, sis, it was a wise fellow who said that a man is something like an egg—if you keep him in hot water a little while he boils soft, but keep him there too long and he hardens. Do you get me?" Jack's question was hung over his shoulder from the front hall, where he was getting into his overcoat and hat.

"Yes, I get you," laughed Betty, as she curled up in a big tapestried armchair in front of the fireplace.

Although she had firmly resolved not to give a single thought to Fred Markham until he apologized for his part in their quarrel of the evening before, somehow, as she gazed into the fire, her thoughts were all of him. The quarrel had come about from Betty's mention of a lark she had enjoyed at a fancy dress ball at the country club a few evenings before when a moving picture had been taken of the ball room by a society man whose latest fad was moving pictures.

"Great Scott!" exclaimed Fred. "I hope you didn't get in range of the picture machine?"

"Why, yes! Why not? Larry Mapes and I did a special stunt before it."

"And may I ask when and where this picture is to be run as a means of flaunting you in the face of the public?"

"Now may I ask," began Betty, "whether this picture is any affair of yours and whether you want to shield the public or the picture by preventing its appearance?"

"It may not be my affair, Betty—that rests with you," Fred answered, "but I want to protect the picture because you're in it."

And so the quarrel had continued until Fred had bowed a formal good night to a haughty Betty.

She was still curled up in the armchair, gazing meditatively at the fire when her mother and father returned from their dinner engagement at Judge Mapes'.

"My, but you're home early!" she exclaimed. "Did the judge run out of stories or did the cook run short on courses?"

"Neither, my dear," answered her father, as he removed his gloves and slapped them together and held them tight in his right hand, "but Larry evidently ran out of sane amusements and came near causing his own finish as well as that of two other people."

"Poor old Larry! What's he up to now?" asked Betty indifferently.

"He's in the hospital right now, having his many bruises dressed, and a poor little chorus girl will be too nervous to stand in the front row tonight, and—with a sly look from under her frowning eyebrows—"Fred Markham has got a smashed roadster, a bruised head and some broken ribs as mementos of his heroism."

"Fred Markham! Daddy, tell me what you mean!" There was no lack of eagerness now in Betty's big eyes.

"Well, Fred was driving along in the park and he saw Larry's little red and white racer come shooting toward him like a cannon ball and on the same side of the road as he was. There was a small embankment sloping down from the road, and Fred tried to turn his car down that embankment before the racer hit him, but its front wheel struck his back one, and his machine turned turtle and Larry's went smash."

"Oh, daddy"—almost in a whisper—"is Fred badly hurt? What made him try to jump the embankment? Why didn't he cross to the other side of the road?"

Betty was puzzled at the questioning look that passed between her mother and her father before there was any answer to her questions.

"Because, Betty," said her father slowly, "there was a chance that Fred also might go that way, and as Fred saw there was a girl with Larry he took no chance because he thought the girl might be you."

At that moment Betty's brother Jack came bustling into the hall and up to the library door.

"Gee, sis," he blurted out, with the air of one who has big news to tell. "Markham came deuced near being a scrambled egg instead of a hard-boiled one." In spite of Betty's wail of protest, he added, "But instead of staying in the hospital, he made them take him to his own apartment and insisted he was all right, notwithstanding his broken ribs."

Betty vanished up the stairway the next instant, and when Jack went up a few moments later she was at the telephone.

"And, Fred, do be very careful, dear," she was saying, "and are you sure you have forgiven me and that your happiness is greater than your hurts?" After the briefest pause, she added, timidly, "And, Fred, I just want to say that, after all, Mr. Mordant's picture machine fooled on the picture they took at the fancy dress ball." Then she hung up the receiver with a lingering touch.

Beautiful Crater Lake in Oregon Has An Interesting Geological History

In the heart of the Cascade Mountains of our Northwest, whose volcanoes were in constant eruption in the ages before history, and now, extinct and ice-plated, shine like huge diamonds in the sunlight, there lies, jewel-like in a setting of lava, a lake of unbelievable blue. The visitor who comes suddenly upon it stands silent with emotion, overcome by its quite extraordinary beauty and by a strange sense of mystery which even the unimaginative feel keenly and which increases rather than decreases with familiarity.

This is Crater Lake. One of the very largest of these ancient volcanoes was Mount Mazama. It stood in the southern central part of what is now Oregon, two hundred miles south of Mount Rainier and nearly as lofty. It was about the height of Mount Shasta, in plain sight of which it rose nearly a hundred miles to its north.

But this was ages ago. No human eyes ever saw Mount Mazama. Long before man came, the entire upper part of it in some titanic cataclysm fell in upon itself as if swallowed by a subterranean cavern, leaving its crater-like lava sides cut sharply downward into a central abyss.

What a spectacle that must have been! The first awful depth of this vast hole no man can guess. But the volcano was not quenched; it burst up through the collapsed lavas in three places, making lesser cones within the greater, but none quite so high as the surrounding rim.

Then the fires ceased and gradually, as the years passed, springs percolated into the vast basin and filled it with water within a thousand feet of its rim. As you see it today one of these cones emerges a few hundred feet from the surface. The lake is 2,000 feet deep in places. It has no inlet of any sort nor is there any stream running out of it; but the water is supposed to escape by underground channels and to reappear in the Klamath River, a few miles away.

The Indians believed that Crater Lake was the home of a great spirit whom they called Liao. The blue waters teemed with giant crawfish, his servants, some of them so large that they could reach great claws to the top of the cliffs and seize venturesome visitors. Another great spirit chieftain, whom they called Skell, was supposed to live in the Klamath Marsh near by and to have many servants who could take at will the forms of eagles and antelopes.

War broke out, so the Indian legend says, between Liao and Skell and Skell was captured. The monsters from the lake tore out his heart and played ball with it, tossing it back and forth from mountain top to mountain top. But it was caught in the air by one of Skell's eagles and by him passed to one of Skell's antelopes, and by him passed to others who finally escaped with it.

Skell's body miraculously grew again around his heart and, in time, he captured Liao, and tore his body into fragments which he tossed into the lake. The giant crawfish, thinking them fragments of Skell's body, devoured them greedily. But when, last of all, Liao's head was thrown in, the monsters recognized it and would not eat it.

The remains of Liao's head remain today sticking out of the water of Crater Lake. Some Indians still look upon it with awe, but scientists recognize it as the little cone described above. Its name is Wizard Island.

Another legend describes the strength-giving power of the water. A band of Klamath Indians came unexpectedly upon the rim and ran away in terror. But one, braver than the others, remained to gaze upon its beauty. He lit a camp fire and slept.

Again and again he returned. One day he ventured to the water's edge. After many moons he dared even to bathe in the lake, and was filled with great strength. He told his tribe, and after many moons, others came and bathed and were strengthened. Then all the tribe bathed in the waters and became wonderfully strong.

But finally Liao had his revenge. His monsters seized the brave who first ventured, bore him to the highest part of the rim and tore his body into small pieces. The spot where this was done is today called Liao Rock.

Crater Lake is one of the most beautiful spots in America. The gray lava rim is remarkably sculptured. The water is remarkably blue, a lovely turquoise along the edges, and, in the deep parts, seen from above, extremely dark. The contrast on a sunny day (Continued on Page 5)

MR. LAWRENCE DEAD

Old Resident Fatally Injured at his Summer Home at Brant Rock

Mr. Charles Lawrence, a resident of this city for nearly thirty years, died about midnight last Saturday, the result of injuries received earlier that evening by a passing automobile. Mr. Lawrence was at the summer home of his daughter, Mrs. George W. Barber at Brant Rock at the time, the accident taking place in that town.

MR. CHARLES LAWRENCE

Mr. Lawrence was born at East Lexington in 1832 and observed his 84th birthday at Brant Rock on August 6. He began business as a dealer in produce in Faneuil Hall Market, Boston, in 1857, later removing to Commercial street, where the business is still conducted under the firm name of Charles Lawrence & Co. He was a member of the Boston Produce Exchange and the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Lawrence has made his summer home at Brant Rock for many years, and was treasurer of the Union Chapel of that place.

Mr. Lawrence is survived by one son, Mr. J. Edward Lawrence of Winthrop, and one daughter, Mrs. George W. Barber of Newton.

Funeral services were held at the Newton M. E. Church Wednesday afternoon, in charge of Rev. Dr. George S. Butters, assisted by Rev. G. Charles Gray. There was music by the Apollo Quartet and Dr. Archibald T. Davidson was at the organ. The burial was in the Old Cambridge Cemetery.

Newton Assessors Find Many Machines Valued at $1,500,000

Some interesting figures relative to automobiles in this city have been gathered from the Assessors' tax lists for the present year.

1974 automobiles have been assessed in this city with a total valuation of $1,518,550. An analysis of these figures shows that there are 818 cars with a total value of $221,700 assessed for $450 or less, an average of $271 per car, there are 554 cars between $500 and $950 each, valued at $356,250, an average of $643 per car, and 602 cars of $1000 or over, valued at $940,600, an average of $1562 each, while the grand total shows an average of $769 for each car in the city.

The following table gives the number and value of automobiles by precincts:

SCHOOLS WILL OPEN

To the Editor of the Newton Graphic: Sir:—So many inquiries have been received by the Board of Health in regard to the question of postponing the opening of the public schools because of the occurrence of poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis) that it seems best to state frankly the reasons which have influenced the Board in its decision not to recommend a postponement.

It is felt also that a statement of the present situation in Newton may tend to allay the unnecessary alarm which many persons feel.

From July 1st, 1916, to the present time there have been four cases of poliomyelitis reported to the Board of Health. In the corresponding period in 1915 there had been three cases reported. Since 1907 Newton has had forty-five cases reported, making a yearly average of five.

Very little is known as to the method by which the disease is transmitted, but a study of the present, as well as previous outbreaks seems to show that it is not transmitted from person to person, by contact, as is scarlet fever or diphtheria.

Except under extraordinary conditions which do not exist at present in Newton, closing the schools is not recommended.

In handling any outbreak of disease the measures taken should be those which will give a maximum of protection with a minimum disturbance of normal conditions.

For these reasons the Board of Health believes that the best protection will be afforded by keeping the schools open as usual, and by a careful supervision of the children by doctors and nurses during the first two weeks of the school year.

Preparation for this work is now being made.

In conclusion the Board would ask the public to realize that no epidemic exists in Newton and that there is no cause for undue alarm over the situation.

By direction of the Board of Health,
FRANCIS GEO. CURTIS, M.D., Chairman.

PARENTS' DAY

The summer session of the Playground Department will come to a close on August 31st. The various playgrounds will conduct special programs, weather permitting, on Wednesday afternoon, August 30th, from 2:30 to 4:30.

They will demonstrate plays and games which they have practiced during the season and give a simple exhibition of folk dancing, and also exhibit the occupation work which has been completed during the last few weeks.

The parents of the various districts are cordially invited to use this opportunity to get in touch with the playground work.

NEW HAND BALL COURT

Hand Ball is one of the finest games for developing all-round physical efficiency which is in use at the present time in this country. It is less expensive for the individual playing it than tennis, since all the apparatus needed is a hand ball, which is about the size of a tennis ball. Since there are no raquets and other apparatus needed, very little expense is involved in following up this beautiful sport.

There seems to be a number of people who are not acquainted with this game and they are urged to come out and try the new ball court which has just been completed at the Newton Centre Playground. The Superintendent feels that such hand ball courts ought to be erected on all the Newton Playgrounds, but until it is proved that there are sufficient people who would use such courts, he feels that he cannot recommend the further erection of such courts.

These courts like our tennis courts are open to the public. Registration cards will be posted near the courts just as we have in tennis, and people can sign up for the hours they may want to use the court. Those interested are invited to consult the local director at the Newton Centre Playground.

MR. CHAPIN DEAD

Mr. Sumner F. Chapin, a resident of this city for forty years, and employed as a foreman at the Silver Lake Cordage factory, died last Wednesday at his home on Waban park, Newton. Mr. Chapin was born in Skowhegan, Maine, and was 70 years of age. During the Civil War he served for a year in the United States Navy. He was a member of Charles Ward Post G. A. R. He is survived by a widow who was formerly, Miss Carrie Turner of this city.

Funeral services were held under the auspices of Charles Ward Post at his late home yesterday afternoon, the impressive ritual of the order being under the direction of Post Commander Orrin W. Nash with Past Commander George M. Fiske acting chaplain. The body will be taken to Skowhegan, Me., for burial tomorrow.

THE PEAFOWL

By KEITH KENYON.

Dexter Conrad approached the formidable iron gates that were the entrance to Frogmore, the handsome estate of the Cullens, at East Orange.

Miss Cullen was within the gates feeding a handful of grain to a pair of peacocks that were spreading their tail feathers for her admiration. Miss Cullen was no less lovely than the peacocks and quite as vain.

"I wonder," Conrad said, raising his hat respectfully, "if there is a vacancy of any sort on the estate. I am anxious to get a position in the country for a few months."

The girl within the gates cut him short with a haughty stare.

"We are not in the habit of employing tramps. Only people well recommended need apply for work." She turned away, as if the interview was over.

"But I do not happen to be a tramp. I am a stranger looking for light employment, having lost my energy in the city, and desiring to find it again. I am sorry to have troubled you."

"There is a lot of work on the place—extra work—on account of spring planting—transplanting from the conservatories—roses and shrubbery. Are you familiar with such work?"

"I have done nothing beyond amateur flower cultivation, but, being a lover of such work, I have had great success at it."

Miss Cullen's eyes were appraising him from head to foot, disparagement in her glance.

Conrad added quickly: "But I suppose, I have sufficient intelligence to look after your roses, and if you happen to have an orchid house—"

"Orchids!" she exclaimed and a new light came into her eyes. "I have some rare ones that the head gardener knows nothing whatever about. It's breaking my heart—to see them fading day by day."

"Not doing well, eh?" he asked. "I spent a year down in South America, where they abound."

It turned out that Conrad's familiarity with orchids gained him a position on the estate. He was delighted when he found that he might occupy a small cottage adjoining the plant houses.

From day to day Barbara kept her eye on him. In fact, daily contact with Conrad was teaching the mistress of Frogmore to forget that her new gardener was but a hireling. His optimism and deep knowledge on many subjects amazed her.

Thus he compelled her to listen to a chord in her own heart which she had striven for years to stifle. She had been trying to live according to convention and false ideals of happiness.

One day she woke to the knowledge that through what she regarded as some strange perversity of her nature she had fallen in love with her gardener.

"The horror of it!" she gasped. There followed a speedy return of her old-time self-esteem, and she resolved to put an end to the disquieting thing without delay.

So, with the intention of burning her bridges so that she might never be tempted to cross them again, she went swiftly down through the long gardens toward Conrad's cottage. As she drew near, she heard the click of a typewriter. The casement was open and through it she saw her new gardener seated at the machine and so intent upon his work that he did not even raise his eyes as she stood before him at the window.

"Conrad!" she spoke firmly. "Hello! Who is it?" He rose quickly and in a moment was by her side. "You want me for something, Miss Cullen?" he asked deferentially.

"Only to say that since the spring work is about over I shall need you any more," she said constrainedly.

There was silence for a moment. "I'm glad," Conrad said then, with evident relief in his tone. "I had planned to tell you that I must return to the city in the morning."

Greatly to her discomfort, his prompt acquiescence irritated Barbara. That anyone should be so resigned to leave her service hurt her self-esteem. The loftiness of manner that had been absent for several weeks returned immediately. "Indeed! May I ask if you have bettered your position?" she said, with a perfectly audible sniff.

"Yes," admitted Conrad briskly. "I have gained my end at last. See!" He pointed to a mass of half sheets that were scattered over the scant furniture of the cottage and some of them on the floor. "That is the script of a novel which was accepted by a publisher a year ago. I couldn't get it finished—for the pot had to boil, you know—but there it is!" He threw out his chest and breathed a sigh of satisfied achievement. His eyes were fairly aglitter.

"So," Barbara flashed angrily, "that is it! You simply have been using me as a medium to further your own selfish ends!"

"Miss Cullen!" he ejaculated, amazed at her attitude. "When have I failed to give full value for favors received?"

"How should I know you were other than you seemed?"

"I don't see that it matters." "Well, I have been treating you as a common servant, and no doubt you have been criticising me for my—my stupidity. And I'm awfully fond of you."

THE ETERNAL FEMINE

By IZOLA FORRESTER.

"Hello, hello! Yes, this is Milt. Oh!"—Milton's tone breathed interest and surprise—"It's you, girlie?"

Beth turned around and stared with wide-open eyes, listening.

"Indeed, I will—right away. Not a bit of it. I'm awfully glad to help out. Goodby."

He hung up the receiver and wheeled about, looking not at Beth, but at the clock.

"It's Mrs. Hewitt. Her husband's in Baltimore, and wired her to meet him, and the maid's gone, and there's nobody to help her down with her suitcase. She wants me to run up to dinner and take her to the station afterward. You don't mind, of course, Beth?"

"Who is Mrs. Hewitt?" she asked frigidly.

"Why, she's a girl I knew out in Denver, you know."

"I don't know. How old is she and what does she look like?"

"Now, Beth"—Milton looked a bit bored as if he hated to go into the subject, it was so trivial—"I think we agreed that real love is above jealousy. This is only common courtesy. I've known 'Girlie' Cooper—she used to be a Cooper—since I was a boy at school. She's about twenty-four, I guess—around there."

At eighteen twenty-four looks worldly wise and experienced. Beth pursed her lips.

"I'll be back by nine," added Milton. Beth looked at him with growing suspicion.

"Do you think you'll need a cushion as a tame cat?" she inquired wistfully. "You needn't come back here, Milt. She could call a taxi and go down by herself. Of course, you can do just as you please, but you needn't come back here if you go carting suitcases around for old sweethearts."

"You know, Milt, you can't deceive me one bit." She leaned her adorable chin on her palm and looked up at him. "I've heard of 'Girlie' Cooper. Mrs. Daniels told me you were engaged to her and perfectly wild over her five years ago. I think it's terrible for the man you love to have memories of other girls."

She rose suddenly and left him standing there, expostulating.

She really did need a lesson. Milton told himself severely. Utter lack of faith in him was too much to bear unchecked.

All this he told himself going up to Girlie's, all the way through dinner, all the way downtown. Girlie talked incessantly of Hobart, her husband, of his congressional ambitions, his tastes, his achievements. She was a little, appealing sort of woman, with big brown eyes and a wistful chin. Milton found himself comparing her mentally with Beth's beautiful clear-eyed buoyant girlishness.

"You know the real reason why I asked you to see me to the station, Milt," she said as they entered the taxi. "It's for Hobart's sake. I want you to see that his new bill is handled fairly by the papers. You will, won't you, Milt? I don't know myself just what it's about, but it must be a splendid measure or he'd never take it up. He's that type of man, you know, Milt. Just ask Miss Wharton."

"Beth?" asked Milton, alarmed, "what does she know about him?"

"Why, didn't you know?" The big brown eyes met his in surprise. "She saved his life. We've been married a year, and it was before he met me. She was hardly more than a child, he told me, and they were all down at Pinehurst for the late winter season. I believe he was accidentally shot, and she found him as she was riding through the mountains and saved him."

"Was—was he in love with her?" asked Milt feebly. "Quite romantic, wasn't it?"

"He was till he met me," Girlie answered complacently. "He'll never destroy her pictures. He's got forty snapshots of her, I do believe, taken that season. I hated her till I heard you were going to marry her."

The next morning, Beth met him, radiant and ready for their usual walk in the park.

"I'm so sorry, dear," she said, "but you know you would go. I know women are perfect cats, and she only wanted to tell you about Hobart and me; so I tried to keep you from going. I refused him about ten times, Milt, and I'm not one bit jealous of her."

Milton stared thoughtfully at the spring vista ahead of them. And he had feared to wound her, had wanted to teach her a lesson.

"Why didn't you tell me you knew him?" he asked.

"I never even thought of him. Don't you know, Milt," her voice was strong with faith, "when the real big love comes into your life it seems to just sweep away everything else. Besides, I didn't want you to know I was—er—lobbying. Isn't that what you call it? The woman's club I belong to is behind a bill, something about fountains at street corners, and we wanted him to present it, so I wrote to him about it and it comes up tomorrow. Aren't you glad, dear? If you only could get something into the papers about it, I'd love you for it, Milt."

Milton gloomed at the landscape, realizing for the first time in his life the underlying power of the eternal feminine.

"I'll try," he promised.

MY NEWSPAPER

I find her daily at my door.
This flaunting, haunting hussy,
A welcome guest in idle hours,
A bore when one is busy.

She pries and peers, she sobs and sneers,
She has an ear for tattle,
She mixes pretty paragraphs
With stirring tales of battle.

You court her favors and she sulks
You flee her and she follows,
Her faith is weak when truth you speak,
The lies she always swallows.

I sometimes try to put her by,
But yet, I must confess it,
I grumble with, I pine without,
My newspaper. God bless it!

SUMMER OUTING

The Clafin Guard Veteran Association held its summer outing on Saturday, August 19th, by a visit to the harbor forts where at Fort Strong they were entertained by Colonel Fullerton, Commanding the Mass. Coast Artillery Corps, with target practice by a battalion of his command with the big disappearing guns at a moving target eight miles at sea, the shots being very effective. The range towers with the complicated instruments and telephone connections to the men at the guns is wonderfully perfect, and was immensely interesting and instructive, showing how scientifically the gun practice at our forts is handled. Very few civilians as well as old soldiers have any idea of what excellence this work has been brought to. Afterwards the Association dined at the Pemberton Inn, Pemberton, returning in the evening to Boston, after a very enjoyable outing.

This Association is a live one, tho not as large in numbers as it should be. The spring and summer outings are new to this Association, this being the second year and it is intended to continue these each year in addition to the regular annual meeting and dinner in October.

PARK SQUARE THEATRE—At the Park Square Theatre Monday evening, September 4th, Messrs. Cohan and Harris will present "Hit-The-Trail-Holiday," an American comedy, written by George M. Cohan from an idea suggested by George Middleton and Guy Bolton. The play is in four acts and its presentation at the Park Square will serve to reintroduce to the local stage Fred Niblo, one of America's best comedians who but recently returned from a three years' engagement in Australia.

GOT PRIZED STOVE

ESKIMO EARNED POSSESSION
DEAREST TO HIS HEART.

Big Steel Ship's Range Subject of His Adoration—His Igloo Now Easily the Warmest in All the Territory of Alaska.

Penaski was an old Eskimo who ruled in feudal fashion a little settlement about 30 miles away, between our winter quarters and Port Clarence. He had a wild yearning to possess our stove. It was a big steel ship's range that weighed 400 pounds, which, by infinite labor, we had brought up the Cruz-ga-ma-pa river by flatboat.

When you consider that the Eskimo gets along with one fire a day in the middle of the dirt floor of his hut, the smoke of which goes out through a hole in the roof, and the rest of the time relies on hermetic sealing and animal heat, you will see that it was a noble and worthy desire. Furthermore, Penaski knew an Eskimo down the coast toward Nome who boasted of owning a little cast iron heater; he wanted to outshine that fellow.

Penaski was rich according to his own standards. He had a home-made still made of a coal-oil can and a gun barrel, in which he made "tuguk" from a mash of flour or rice. That he sold to his neighbors at a large profit. He had four wives, a good dog team and plenty of furs and fish.

When the end of winter drew near the stove became an embarrassment to us. Our claims lay 60 miles farther inland, and it was hard to get provisions in to them. If we carried our big range over we might not be able to take anything to cook on it. We approached Penaski on the matter. After some negotiation he agreed to earn the stove by transporting seven loads of provisions over the divide by dog sled.

Bright and early the next morning there was a howling of dogs and a chatter of voices, and into our camp came all the inhabitants and dogs of the little village. They loaded up and started, 50 pounds to the dog. The trip was a weary one to me, but to the Eskimos, gorging on our grub, it was a glorious picnic. They would travel only as fast as I would lead. The slower we went the better they liked it. We had to break trail by snowshoes, and I led the way.

By the second night I was worn out. So was Penaski; but at every stop he would come up and start an eager jargon. He would hold his hands five feet apart. I would nod. Then he would indicate the height and breadth of the stove with his hands. I would reassure him, and he would start off with fresh vigor.

The third day was like a nightmare to me. I was dazed with fatigue. Every time we stopped to rest I threw myself down on a sled, seeing nothing, hearing nothing, knowing nothing. Every time we started again I moved stiffly, like an automaton. About midday we reached our goal, unloaded and started back.

We returned light and quickly. On the fourth day we pulled into camp in the half light of midnight. Penaski demanded instant payment. We dumped the fire into the snow and delivered the goods. The Eskimo lashed two sleds together, hitched on all the dogs, loaded on the hot stove and started off, howling and shouting, for their village, 30 miles away. The last we saw of our mammoth cooker it was taking a flying leap down a ten-foot bank, and dragging all the Eskimos with it.

Alaska Joe was over that way the next winter. He told me that Penaski's igloo is the warmest in all Alaska, and that the Eskimo sits day and night with his aged limbs crossed and his rheumy eyes half shut, adoring his stove.—Chicago News.

Desert Cisterns.

Perhaps nothing could better illustrate the difficult nature of Persia as regards military operations than the knowledge of the extreme measures that have to be adopted for the conservation of water over a large part of the region in which the Turks, Russians and even a considerable portion of Persians are now in conflict.

The Caspian watershed of Persia is fairly well watered and wooded, but all the region south of about the latitude of Teheran—the central and southern zones—are almost absolute desert, the largest cities being near the base of the mountains, where the rivers have not had time to be absorbed in the burning sands. At other points there are occasional wells and springs, but the principal sources of water in these desert regions are the strange cisterns.

Stone conduits carry water from the mountains to the cisterns on the desert plains.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Swiss Post Office.

The Swiss post office saves its old stamps, and this month it offers 10,000 used copies of the current high value Swiss stamps, 3, 5, and 10 francs, for sale. Last year a similar offer to the trade was realized. The three denominations are offered at 10d per stamp in what is styled "first quality," and 7d per stamp in the second quality, or 2s 6d and 1s 8d the set of three. The first quality stamps were only used on dockets, etc., which never left the post office; while the second kind were used in the mails. The stamps are only supplied to the Swiss dealers, but British dealers can obtain them from the Swiss dealer at a small commission of these prices.

AAOLY AND THE OVERSHOES

Old Gentleman Suffered Considerable Agony of Mind Because of His New Footwear.

The "boys" were all sitting round the stove in the harness shop, saying little. All at once Jed Rollins spoke up:

"I can remember well when they first brought out the patent contraption that fastens 'em. Fore that we used to hev that kind with straps and common buckles, miz'ble, puttin' things to buckle up, too."

"Aaoly Sprague used to live next to me up in Goshen Gore more'n forty years ago, and he saw the new clasps along when they first come out, and bought him a pair of rubber shoes with some of 'em on."

"Meigs Weeks, the storekeeper, put 'em on him, and he went home, proud as Old Cuffy. After he got home, Caroline, his wife, and he set round all evenin' admirin' of 'em till long past ten, and then the rukus begun. He didn't know how to take 'em off, and she wouldn't let 'im go to bed with 'em on. He dassn't experiment with 'em fer fear of breakin' the clasp and spillin' his new shoes."

"I vow, if 't been me, I'd 'a' hit the old coot in the head with the ax!" said Uncle Nate Bancroft, earnestly.

"That was what Caroline felt like doin', 'cordin' to what she said afterwards," continued Jed. "After he rassed with 'em a while he said he'd seen me buyin' a pair same time he did, and he'd go over and ask me how to unfasten 'em."

"So what does he do but pike off cornerways through the sugar place to my house, in the deep snow, upwards of half a mile, 'long after 'leven o'clock at night."

"I heard someone hollerin' out in front, and thinks I, what'n time's broke loose! I got up and there stood Aaoly. 'I want to go to bed,' says he."

"'Wal, why'n time don't ye?' says I. 'What'n tunket ye doin' over here? Hes yer wife throwed ye out, or are ye lost?'"

"'I can't take off my shoes!' he bust out, kind of half snivelin'. 'I'm 'fraid I'll break 'em.'"

"I got him into the house and give them clasps a twitch! 'There, says I, 'ye old fool, go along home and go to bed if ye want to!' And off he went."

"Caroline said he wore 'em home unfastened and got 'em plumb full of snow. Dassn't fasten 'em up fer fear he couldn't undo 'em again.'—Youth's Companion.

Train Deafened Soldiers to Work.

According to official estimates, more than 50,000 German soldiers have lost their hearing in the terrible battles of this war. To enable these unfortunates to earn their bread after the war, a number of schools have been established, with the aid of the government.

The largest one is in Hamburg, and has about 300 pupils, who receive very careful instruction, and in a comparatively short time become proficient in lip reading. Many of them are able to take up their former trades and professions again, but some have to be trained for other vocations. About 15 per cent have their hearing partly restored by delicate operations and special training.

Recently 30 deaf soldiers were "graduated" from the Hamburg institute. Among them were three lawyers, two school teachers, five clerks and bookkeepers, two civil engineers and two office managers, who all have returned to their former occupations.

Barrel of Cement Per Capita.

Every man, woman and child in the United States was entitled to one barrel of cement as his per capita share in 1915. The demand during 1916 will doubtless be larger. There are approximately 100,000,000 people in the United States, and the 1915 production of commercial cement was about 100,000,000 barrels, says the Improvement Bulletin.

Some curious disproportions have been noted in the demand for cement in the various states. Very little was used in Mississippi and South Carolina. Iowa's demand per capita was larger than any other state in the union, being 1.64 barrels. Montana obtained nearly as much.

One of the companies engaged in the industry produces 18,000,000 barrels of cement yearly. While the manufacturers formerly bought some of the machinery used in the manufacture of cement in Europe, everything now needed by a cement mill can be obtained in the United States.

Activities of Women.

The various trade unions in Texas are working for a minimum wage for women.

Wisconsin university has 401 woman graduates in the business and professional world.

Miss Anna M. Halderman, the only woman baker in Girard, Kan., is soon to be married.

Cornell university now admits women to the faculty of the college of arts and sciences.

Miss Jennie Cardell of Oklahoma City will be the first woman in the United States to fill the office of internal revenue collector. She will be collector in that city during the first 15 days of this month while the regular collector is attending the Democratic convention.

ADMINISTRATOR'S SALE

By virtue of a license issued by the Probate Court of Middlesex County, dated August 11, 1916, the following described real estate of James P. Hagerty, late of Newton, will be sold at public auction, on the premises, on Thursday, September 14, at two o'clock in the afternoon, namely:

The land with the buildings thereon situated in that part of Newton called Newton Upper Falls and bounded: Beginning at the Southwesterly corner thereof at land now or formerly of Caroline R. Winslow and by a small culvert on Chestnut St., thence Northerly along said Chestnut St. 138 1/2 ft. to Elliot St. 88 ft. to land now or formerly of Newton Mills; thence Southerly along said land of Newton Mills as fence and wall now stands 138 1/2 ft. to said land now or late of Winslow; thence Westerly along said land now or late of Winslow, 72 1/2 ft. to the point of beginning, containing by estimation 11000 sq. ft.

Also another parcel beginning at the intersection of Elliot St., with Chestnut St. thence Southerly by said Chestnut St. 118 ft. to land of Jesse Winslow; thence South 88 West by said land of Winslow, 53.9 ft. to land of Patrick Hatigan and Edward Ryan; thence Northerly along said Ryan's land about 127 1/2 ft. more or less to land of Davis C. Mills; thence Northerly in a straight line to Elliot St.; thence Easterly on the Southerly side of Elliot St. about 46 ft. more or less to the point of beginning. This property is subject to a mortgage of $1500, and a second mortgage of $2000.

Also another parcel commencing on the Highway by land of Cyrus Everett, now or formerly, and thence running Southerly by said highway 93 ft. to a narrow strip of land formerly owned by J. C. Everett; thence Easterly 79 ft. to land formerly of said Everett; thence Northerly 93 ft. to land formerly of said Cyrus Everett; thence Westerly 170 ft. to the point of beginning, containing 59 sq. rods more or less.

Also another parcel adjoining the last described parcel, commencing at the Northeast corner of land now or formerly owned by the Newton Mills, and running westerly by land now or formerly of the said Newton Mills, 142 ft. more or less to the county road; thence running Northerly by the line of said road about 6 ft.; thence running Easterly by land of Willard Marcey 141 ft.; thence running Southerly by land now or formerly of George Gould, 13 ft. to the first mentioned bound.

The last two parcels are subject to a mortgage of $3500, held by the Newton Savings Bank.

The said premises are to be sold subject to all liens and encumbrances, and the sum of two hundred dollars will be required to be paid in cash by the purchaser. Other terms will be made at the time and place of sale.

BRAYES FIELD

Without doubt the most notable dramatic undertaking of the year will be the mammoth open air performances of Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice" by Nat C. Goodwin the most popular American actor and his all star company at Brayes' Field, Boston, next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, August 29, 30, and 31. Elaborate preparations have been made for these performances with a view to making them a fitting climax to the many Shakespearean tercentenary celebrations which have taken place throughout the country. No more ideal place could be selected than Brayes' Field which has come to be known as the "Home of Big Things" because of the perfect manner in which it is laid out and its almost perfect acoustic properties. In order that all may see perfectly and hear the speaking voice with ease, only one section of the immense grand stand will be used and the mammoth stage will be placed directly in front of this section less than twenty feet away. This section is entirely protected from rain, and as the stage will be likewise protected the performances will be unaffected by the weather. A scenic production, larger than has ever before been used for a dramatic performance in this country, is being built and painted and is fast nearing completion. The costumes will be gorgeous and the lighting effects will be decidedly novel and spectacular. In other words the performances will be given just the same as in a closed theatre, only magnified many times.

An interesting feature of the situation is indicated by the filing of a petition to place on the ballot at the State election in November the question of instructing our representatives to vote for the initiative and referendum and other amendments to the Constitution. This petition is signed by 20 citizens, most of them identified with the Democratic party. To place this question on the ballot, 200 names must be filed at least sixty days before the State election, so that on this matter the time limit will not be up until Sept. 7th. It will be recalled that this question was placed on the ballot two years ago and was given a large favorable majority, but as the matter did not come before the House for action, our representatives at that time were not called upon to vote for or against it.

Death on August 23 of Edward D. Brooks the oldest resident of Newtonville.

"Don't grumble 'bout the weather much, For easier 'tis you'll find, To make your mind to weather, Than weather to your mind, so E. Bradshaw says."

"Fred H. Hovey has been doing some great tennis playing this week at Newport, R. I., and he played to win, defeating all his opponents until his play with Hobart in the finals on Tuesday when he was defeated."

"The Gamewell Fire Alarm Telegraph Company have purchased a watering cart to lay the dust in front of the factory. Some of our public spirited citizens should present the firm with some inducements to water the main streets of the village (Upper Falls) each day."

REAL ESTATE

Alvord Brothers have sold for the estate of John Ward to David A. Waugh a lot on the corner of Ward street and Nobscot road, Newton Centre, containing 7450 square feet. He will at once start the erection of a single house for his own occupancy from plans by A. O. Plantinga.

Alvord Bros. have made the following leases:

The Bosson house, 87 Hillside road, to Chas. E. White.

The Conrad house, 234 Langley road, to W. Muther.

The Bacon house, 72 Oxford road, to Philip S. Durfee.

The Walworth house, 19 Moreland avenue, Newton Centre, to William J. Hodges.

The apartment in the new Scott apartment house, Langley road, corner Union street, Newton Centre, to R. W. Werth.

The apartment in Bradford court to Abbie M. Prescott and H. L. Titcomb.

Through the office of Alvord Bros. H. Weisberg has sold to the Directorate, Inc., a lot of land on the easterly side of Sumner street, next to the corner of Beacon street, containing about 6,000 square feet, valued at fifty cents a foot.

The following sales have been made recently in the Waban section of Newton, by Joseph Congdon:

Henry B. Day has conveyed to Merrill G. Hastings of Cambridge a lot of 14,988 square feet of land on Windsor road, Waban, overlooking the Brae Burn Country Club grounds. The new owner has plans for a colonial house to be built at once for his own occupancy.

Mrs. Alice M. Buxton of West Roxbury, has sold her house on Woodward street, Waban, to Harold A. Bellows of Brookline. Mr. Bellows will occupy it about Sept. 1.

Henry B. Day et al, Trustees, have sold a lot of 12,204 square feet of land on Dorset road to H. W. Brightman of Winthrop. It is his intention to build next spring for a home.

Mabel A. Blaney has conveyed to James R. Emmett of Newton Highlands a lot of upwards of 33,000 feet, located on Windsor road. It is one of the finest building sites in Waban, as it commands a beautiful view of the Brae Burn Country Club grounds. The new owner will build.

Harold A. Bellows has sold a lot of 9,900 feet on Beacon street, to Charles on Dorset road of Dorchester, who will begin at once the erection of a house for his own occupancy.

Frank E. Muzzy has sold his property on Wilde road, consisting of an eight-room house with all modern improvements and 21,753 feet of land, to Leon E. Gilpin of Roslindale who will take possession on Sept. 1.

Lilly Gilchrist Weed has sold her property on Waban avenue, consisting of a modern ten-room house, everything up to date, garage and upwards of 20,000 feet of land, to Charles E. F. Fogg of Auburndale, who will occupy it about Sept. 1.

SHUBERT THEATRE—With the original cast and a special orchestra, Arthur Hammerstein's sensational musical success, "Katinka," with T. Roy Barnes, which has just closed a year's run in New York, will begin a limited engagement at the Shubert Theatre, Boston, next Monday evening, August 28th. The same elaborate stage settings, which surpassed in gorgeousness and artistic blending, anything displayed in the metropolis of American theatricals last winter, will be displayed here, and the rich gowns of the female principals and chorus promise a revelation to the most acute followers of prevailing styles in feminine costume.

"Katinka" tells the story of a Russian girl who is forced into marriage with an elderly statesman, much to her distaste. On the night of her wedding, she is spirited away by her lover, Ivan, who has learned that Boris already has a wife, supposed to be "somewhere in Turkey." The two, with an American friend named Hopper, set out to discover this Mrs. Boris, and the play deals with the laughable incidents of the search. Popular price matinees will be the rule on Wednesdays during this engagement. The best seats will be only one dollar and a half.

WILBUR THEATRE—"Very Good Eddie," musical play by Philip Bartholomae, Guy Bolton, Jerome Kern and Schuyler Green, founded on the farce, "Over Night," has made a tremendous hit at the Wilbur Theatre, Boston, where it enters on its 3rd week next Monday evening, August 28th. "Very Good Eddie" is characterized by the same simplicity and refinement that made "Nobody Home" so welcome an attraction at the theatre a year ago. It comes here, as did its predecessor, from a long run at the Princess Theatre in New York, a little playhouse presided over by Miss Elizabeth Marbury and Ray Comstock, producing managers who have reaped rich rewards by adherence to their convictions that extravagant splendor and boisterous nonsense are not the prime requisites of successful musical comedy. Every evening's audience expresses approval of the new production with joyous acclamation, laughing uproariously over nearly every line and situation, and insisting upon hearing every song sung again and again. It was the first show of the season and the generous repeat was ravenously enjoyed. There was good reason, too, for most of the applause. Rarely has a more brightly diverting and tuneful little play been presented here, nor has one been recently seen that was more artistically staged and costumed.

Next time you brush your teeth, remember that you paid a tax to the government of five-eighths of one cent on the tooth paste. This money, and that of millions of other little people, is used to dredge rivers alongside docks owned by million-dollar corporations. Dredging a river is comparable to paving a roadway. between the unreal, fairylike rim across the lake and the fantastic sculptures at one's feet, and in the lake between, the myriad gradations from faintest turquoise to deepest Prussian blue, dwells long in the memory.

Unforgettable, also, are the twisted and contorted lava foundations of the inner rim. A boat ride along the edge of the lake reveals these in a thousand changes. At one point near shore a mass of curiously carved lava is called the Phantom Ship because, seen at a distance, it suggests a ship under full sail. The illusion at dusk or by moonlight is striking. In certain slants of light, the Phantom Ship suddenly disappears—a phantom indeed.

Another experience full of interest is a visit to Wizard Island. One can climb its sides and descend into its little crater.

Geologists find Crater Lake of special interest because of the way nature made it. Many volcanoes have had their tops blown off. Mount Rainier was one of these. But no other in the United States has fallen in, like Mount Mazama.

The evidence of this process is quite conclusive. The lava found on the slopes that remain was not blown there from an exploding summit, but ran, hot and fluid, from a crater many thousands of feet higher. The pitch of these outer slopes enables the scientist to tell with reasonable probability how high the volcano originally was.

REV. DR. BULLEN DEAD

Rev. George Bullen, D.D., for many years professor of Christian missions at the Newton Theological Institution, died Sunday night at his home on Ripley terrace, Newton Centre, at the age of 82 years.

He was born in New Sharon, Me., the son of Joseph and Frances G. Bullen. He fitted for college at Waterville Academy, and graduated from Colby College and the Newton Theological Institution. He held pastorates in Hingham, Wakefield, Skowhegan, Me., New London, N. H., and Pawtucket. He remained in Pawtucket for 22 years. He was a member of the board of trustees of Colby College and the Newton Theological Institution.

In 1860 he married Maria Jane Ripley of Newton Centre, and is survived by a widow and two sons, Mr. Dana R. Bullen of Schenectady and Rev. Walter B. Bullen, for many years a missionary in Japan.

The funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon in the chapel of the Newton Centre Baptist Church, preceded by prayers at his late home by Rev. Dr. Spence of Cambridge.

The services at the church were conducted by Rev. John M. English of the Newton Theological Institution, assisted by Rev. Galusha Anderson. Dr. English read two favorite hymns of Dr. Bullen and the selection for later played on the organ by F. M. Green. Prayers were read by Rev. Dr. Charles H. Watson.

Burial took place in the Newton Cemetery, the bearers being Messrs. Frederick L. Anderson, W. C. Burbeck, Sidney B. Paine and Henry H. Kendall, all of Newton Centre.

WILBUR THEATRE—"Very Good Eddie," musical play by Philip Bartholomae, Guy Bolton, Jerome Kern and Schuyler Green, founded on the farce, "Over Night," has made a tremendous hit at the Wilbur Theatre, Boston, where it enters on its 3rd week next Monday evening, August 28th. "Very Good Eddie" is characterized by the same simplicity and refinement that made "Nobody Home" so welcome an attraction at the theatre a year ago. It comes here, as did its predecessor, from a long run at the Princess Theatre in New York, a little playhouse presided over by Miss Elizabeth Marbury and Ray Comstock, producing managers who have reaped rich rewards by adherence to their convictions that extravagant splendor and boisterous nonsense are not the prime requisites of successful musical comedy. Every evening's audience expresses approval of the new production with joyous acclamation, laughing uproariously over nearly every line and situation, and insisting upon hearing every song sung again and again. It was the first show of the season and the generous repeat was ravenously enjoyed. There was good reason, too, for most of the applause. Rarely has a more brightly diverting and tuneful little play been presented here, nor has one been recently seen that was more artistically staged and costumed.

WHEN THE OPERATOR REPORTS THAT "THE LINE IS BUSY," it is because she has taken the time to test the line called for. It would be easier for her to complete the connection than to make such a report. If the operator did not test on every call, she might plug in on a busy line.

Furthermore, "Busy" means that the line (not necessarily the telephone number you have called) is in use. The subscriber on a four-party line may not be talking, but one of the three other subscribers may be, making the entire line closed to traffic, or some one of the party subscribers may have put in a toll call and the line is being held awaiting its completion. Lengthy conversations on unimportant matters often congest party lines and give cause for protests from other subscribers in common.

WHEN THE OPERATOR REPORTS "THEY DON'T ANSWER," she has done all within her means to compel an answer to her summons. That summoning power is the ringing of a bell, a mechanical signal which says, "Someone desires to speak to you." It remains with the person called to be prompt in responding.

If a subscriber is slow in responding, the calling person may hang up the receiver assuming that the former is inaccessible. Then there is an additional inconvenience to the called person when the operator reports, "There is no one on the line now, please excuse it." The operator who makes that report usually is located at a different switchboard than the operator who rang the bell, and is unable to ascertain where the call originated.

JOHNSON—CHANT

Mr. George W. Johnson of Pearl street, Newton, of the firm of Johnson and Kavanaugh, The Graphic Press, sprung a surprise on his friends this week. He left Tuesday on an automobile trip to Maine, and the Wednesday morning papers reported his marriage the previous day at Bellows Falls, Vt., to Miss Irene Hillard Chant, of Jefferson street, Newton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Alfred C. Wilson, and Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are spending their honeymoon on an automobile trip in Maine.

Failure is in a sense, the highway to success, inasmuch as every discovery of what is false, leads us to seek earnestly after what is true, and every fresh experience points out some form of error, which we shall afterward carefully avoid.—Keats.

PALATABLE SWEETBREAD.

The sweetbread received its name from a fancied resemblance to the rising lumps of dough, destined for bread. When buying sweetbreads be sure that they are fresh and choose the largest. They should be pink and clear and if not used immediately should be parboiled.

Enrolled Sweetbreads.—Wash and parboil the sweetbreads and rub them well with butter, then broil over a slow fire, turning occasionally, and basting with butter.

Sweetbreads boiled and pounded to a paste with cooked peas, adding seasoning, makes a most delicious filling for sandwiches.

Sweetbread Salad.—Cut small cooked sweetbreads into dice and mix with twice the amount of finely cut celery. Mix mayonnaise with whipped cream, add a little onion juice and plenty of red pepper and salt and serve on head lettuce with slices of lemon for garnish.

Larded Sweetbreads.—Soak three heart sweetbreads in cold water with a bit of vinegar, drop them in boiling water for three minutes to blanch them, then plunge into cold water, press them between two plates for a half hour. Lard with strips of bacon. Put into a saucepan one sliced carrot, one sliced turnip, a few sprigs of parsley, and one sliced onion; lay on top the larded sweetbreads, and pour over them a cupful of stock, simmer slowly for thirty minutes. Melt a tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan, add a tablespoonful of flour and when well mixed add to the stock; cook five minutes. Dish the sweetbreads and pour over them the sauce and vegetables, or the sauce may be strained.

Sweetbreads with mushrooms is a delicious combination which may be served in ramekins, patty shells or in timbale cases.

Sweetbreads and Bacon.—Blanch the sweetbreads, fry in bacon fat and surround with bits of curled bacon and a few slices of fried cucumber for a garnish.

Character is built out of circumstances. From exactly the same materials one man builds palaces, while another builds hovels.—G. H. Lewes.

DISHES FOR VEGETARIAN.

There are hundreds of delicious dishes quite unknown to the meat eater who has his vegetables only boiled every time they appear.
"Potato Sausage."—Take half a pound of bread crumbs, half a pound of cold mashed potatoes, a quarter of a pound of chopped onions, two eggs and a quarter of a pound of butter, with pepper and salt to taste. Mix all thoroughly and form into sausages, tie each in a cloth and boil as one does puddings. This sausage is good if cooked oatmeal is added instead of bread crumbs.

Vegetable Curry.—Put some butter and slices of carrot in a saucepan, add a turnip cut in dice, some potato and also onion, cut fine. Season with salt and add a little water. When the water reaches the boiling point add two tablespoonfuls of curry powder and a tablespoonful of flour, mixed together with a little cold water to make the mixture smooth. Stir until it boils and allow it to simmer until the vegetables are tender. Peas, cooked beans or rice are also good additions to this dish.

Apple and Almond Pudding.—Stew ten good cooking apples, sweeten to taste and flavor with lemon. Put a layer of cake crumbs in a buttered pudding dish, then add the apple pulp, over this scatter two heaping tablespoonfuls of finely chopped or ground almonds and pour over one cupful of custard. Bake in the oven until the custard is set. When quite cold beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth, then add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and drop it by spoonfuls upon the custard in little heaps; set in the oven again until the whites are of a light brown color. Serve either hot or cold.

Custard Souffle.—Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan and when bubbling hot add two tablespoonfuls of flour, blend well and add a cupful of milk; cool until smooth. Add four egg yolks, beaten with two tablespoonfuls of sugar and set away to cool. Half an hour before serving fold in the beaten whites and bake in a pudding dish set in hot water. Serve with creamy sauce.

Are you in earnest? Seize this very minute
What you can do, or think you can, begin it.
—Goethe.

VALUABLE HINTS.

Have you gone through your home this spring putting away many pieces of bric-a-brac too choice with association to give away, perfectly useless, incongruous things taking up space and causing needless handling to keep in order. If not, do so, for the sake of the comfort of your family. If the things have real value shut them away for a time at least and they will be all the more appreciated when brought out again.

Emerson says, "a lady is serene," doctors tell us that hurry like worry is death to good looks and an enemy to health as well. The people who accomplish the most in the world are those who plan their work well and serenely accomplish it. Did you ever time yourself on a certain piece of work; for example the making and frying of a rule of doughnuts? If so you will know the time needed and will know what to plan for. Of course, there are always the unexpected interruptions which we cannot plan on, but it is wise to know the length of time it takes to do certain pieces of work. If mistresses had a better understanding of these things there would be more peace and harmony in the household. A maid who had a two weeks' washing under way should not be asked to prepare a dinner for invited guests. It is such inconsiderate women who are helping to keep the servant problem still unsolved, and are always looking for a servant. If one is possessed with the precious power of concentration, use an alarm clock and set it at the time that the dinner is to be started or the bread put into or taken out of the oven. It takes but an instant to provide this security and it so relieves the mind that the whole attention may be put upon what ever work is at hand.

When we learn to keep our sense of proportion, and know that, however, desirable it may be to have the washing out early, a sweet temper, a calm and quiet mind are much more to be desired and vastly more appreciated by the home folks.

An aim in life is the only fortune worth finding; and it is not to be found in foreign lands, but in the heart itself.—R. L. Stevenson.

A man has to live with himself and he should see that he always has good company.—Chas. Hughes.

OLD-FASHIONED DISHES.
With all the new and fancy dishes that are daily being originated and which we enjoy, there are none, no matter how tasty that quite take the place of the things we knew and liked in childhood.

Sally Lunn.—Separate the yolks from the whites of two eggs, beat the yolks, add a tablespoonful of sugar, a tablespoonful of shortening, a cupful of milk, a half teaspoonful of salt, and one and a half cupfuls of flour, sifted, with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, beat again and fold in the well-beaten whites of the eggs and bake in three piepans. The mixture should not be more than half an inch thick in each. As soon as they are baked, butter and pile them one on top of the other and send to the table piping hot.

Popovers.—Beat two eggs without separating, add a cupful of milk, and then add this slowly to a cupful of flour mixed with a teaspoonful of salt. Grease very hot gem pans and bake 40 minutes in a hot oven.

Corn Bread.—Beat two eggs very light, add a tablespoonful of sugar, a teaspoonful of salt, a cupful of flour, sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a cupful and a half of sour milk, two tablespoonfuls of softened butter and a half teaspoonful of soda dissolved in the milk. Bake in a well greased dripping pan.

Dumplings.—Take a cupful of milk, add one egg, a little salt and flour, enough to make a stiff mixture; adding two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Drop from a spoon and cook eight minutes without removing the cover. If a teaspoon is used for dropping, eight minutes is sufficient time for cooking.

Raisin Pie.—Grate the rind and chop the pulp of a lemon, add a cupful of raisins, a pinch of salt, a half cupful of molasses, a tablespoonful of butter. Boil together one cupful of sugar (brown) a half cupful of flour and two cupfuls of water five minutes; add the other ingredients and bake in two crusts.

RULES FOR SOLVING THE WORD PUZZLE

Find in the list of words below the twenty-six words, each beginning with a different letter, that can be formed the greatest number of times from the letters in the chart.
 Contestants must decide how many times they can form each word to secure the best results. In case of a tie on the number of words, the contestant having the least unused letters remaining will be declared the winner. It is not possible to use up all the letters in the chart.
 Contestants can use any word only once if they so desire, out no words can be formed except those appearing in the list, and no letter must be used more times than it appears in the chart.
 The Journal reserves the right to demand proof that a solution was worked by the person submitting it.

1919-20 Paint

How paint, put on in 1916, looks in 1919 or 1920 is the real test of its worth. If still in good condition—not cracked nor scaled—you've made a wise selection of materials. It's always good judgment to use and pure linseed oil, mixed to suit the wood in your house and tinted any color you desire.

Such paint is the 1919-20 kind. It is tough, elastic, weather-proof and long-wearing. Come in today and have a talk on the paint question.

HAVE QUEER NAMESHAWAIIANS SHOW PICTURESQUE-NESS IN THEIR CHOICE.

Fancy Liberally Drawn Upon by the Islanders—Question of Gender or Appropriateness a Matter of Little Consideration.

The natives of Hawaii are singularly picturesque in their choice of names. Mr. Scissors, The Thief, The Ghost, The Fool, The Man Who Washes His Dimples, Mrs. Oyster, The Weary Lizard, The Husband of Kaneia (a male dog), The Great Kettle, The First Nose, The Atlantic Ocean, The Stomach, Poor Pussy, Mrs. Turkey, The Tenth Heaven are all names that have appeared in the city directory.

They are often careless of the gender or appropriateness of the names they take. A householder on Bereania street, Honolulu, is called The Pretty Woman (Wahine Maikai); a male infant was lately christened Mrs. Thompson; one little girl is named Samson; another The Man; Susan (Kukena) is a boy; so are Polly Sarah, Jane Peter and Henry Ann. A pretty little maid has been named by her fond parents The Pig Sty (Hale Pau). For some unknown reason—or for no reason at all—one boy is named The Rat Eater (Kamea Oi I Ole).

Rev. Dr. Coan of Hawaii possessed the love of his flock. One morning a child was presented for baptism whose name was given by the parents, Mikia; when the ceremony was finished the parents assured the doctor that they had named the baby for him.

"But my name is not Michael," said the doctor, supposing Mikia to be aimed at.

"We always hear your wife call you Mikia!" answered the mother. She had mistaken Mrs. Coan's familiar "my dear" for her husband's given name.

An old servant in Doctor Wright's family at Kohala caused her grandchild to be baptized in church The Doctor (Kauka); that was its only name. By way of compliment to the early physicians many children were named after their drugs, as Joseph Squills, Miss Rhubarb, The Emetic, The Doctor Who Peeps In at the Door.

Names uncomplimentary, or even disgusting, are willingly borne by their owners; others convey a pleasing and graceful sentiment. Among the latter are the Arch of Heaven (Ka Ria Lani), The River of Twilight (Ka Wia Lani), The Delicate Wreath (Ka Lei ma Lil), The name of Liliu O Kalani, the queen now in retirement, means A Lily in the Sky—Youth's Companion.

The New Paris.

The red pantaloons of the uniforms are now pale blue, and under the steel helmets, similar to the burgonets of the middle ages, the hardened faces of the poilus speak of battles. But flowers are still to be had at the kiosks and from the little pushcarts; children still play noisily in the courtyards, or dance to the music of a chance organ grinder; mothers smile on meeting friends, and stop to talk as ever, and the servants gossip in the market places.

And yet all these faces, old and young, aristocratic and humble, civil or military, bear the same expression, grave, expectant, veiled. One might say that everybody listens to the distant flow of his very heart's blood, while here runs its regular course. It is the atmosphere of universal fraternity which the war has impressed on the French people that later shall perhaps create a new France.—Mrs. Bernardini-Sjoestedt, in Cartoons Magazine.

Daylight and Sleep.

Opponents of the daylight saving bill in England are not likely to go as far as did those of the alteration of the calendar, which took place in the eighteenth century. This change was made to bring England into line with most other European countries who had calculated leap-year differently from them. The result was an apparent loss of 11 days at the beginning of September, and in certain parts of the country riots took place, during which the war cry of the insurgents was "Give us back our eleven days." Theirs, of course, was a permanent loss, whereas those who now object to being deprived of an hour's sleep on May 21 have the consolation of knowing that they will get their own back again in October.—London Chronicle.

Most Wonderful Thing.

"I suppose you see some very remarkable things?" said the inquisitive traveler to the sailor on leave.

"Aye," replied the sailor. "There's some wonderful things. Now the most wonderful thing to my mind—"

He paused to fill a pipe, and the railway carriage held its breath as it awaited submarine revelations.

"The most wonderful thing about this war," continued the sailor, "is the old cat on our ship. She's got a 'amuck of 'er own, and when our watch turns in she 'ops into 'er 'amuck and puts 'er 'ead on a little pillow like a Christian. Me and my mate is 'goin' to take that cat round the 'alls when the bloomin' war is over."—Manchester Guardian.

The Same Species.

He—My dear, where did this awful big spider come from?

She—James, you have been drinking those horrid cocktails again. That's my new spring hat.

'PRENTICE BARBER HAS HOPE

Lad From the Country Whom Shop's Patrons Fear to Trust.

Perhaps he is 25 years old—he looks to be about 16. From seven in the morning until nine in the evening, barring time off for meals, he stands at the extreme end of a line of white-coated men, usually honing a razor or gazing off vacantly into space. Theoretically, he is a barber. Practically, says a writer in the Indianapolis News, he has not yet achieved that position in life. Daily patrons have never seen him wielding a razor on anything but his strop or hone. Every day hundreds of customers visit the shop. Business men, clerks, street car conductors, wagon drivers and others enter the barber shop doors during the day's course, but their actions are substantially alike. After taking off coats and hats they gaze up and down the line of waiting barbers, select the one nearest or pick out an old favorite without so much as a glance at the youth on the end. But if, unfortunately, all the other barbers are busy, the youthful wielder of the razor is more closely inspected. Usually the prospective patron eyes him steadfastly for a moment and then, sadly, slowly and solemnly, but finally, shakes his head and sits down in a far chair to wait until another barber is unoccupied. It may be cowardice, it may be only wise caution. But all seem to be affected alike with a distrust of the mild and rather wistful-faced boy with a razor poised in his hand and a hopeful expression on his countenance. His fingers may be deft, his touch light and sure and his professional skill above criticism in every respect, but nobody seems willing to test his expertise. The potentialities of a razor, those great, red hands and that mild, absent-minded face and look of youthful trustfulness are too great. Meanwhile the light seems to die out of the young barber's eyes and they become sadder with each appraisal in which he is judged and found wanting. Nobody knows with what fond dreams he left a little country town not long ago, after a lesson or two, perhaps, in the village barber shop, and came to the city to earn an honest living and become some day—oh, doubtful hope—a head barber! In him there may be the making of a great barber; perhaps already he has attained a rare degree of excellence. If so his praises remain unknown and unsung. In sight of that tranquil face and those awkward hands in such close proximity to a dangerous-looking razor men lose their hardihood.

Future Supply of Gasoline.

When the quantity of petroleum that can be obtained from the oil wells of the country begins to show signs of diminution there will still be a virtually inexhaustible source of supply. It is the shale beds of Colorado, Utah and Wyoming. The United States geological survey estimates that in Colorado alone there is sufficient shale, in beds three or more feet thick, to yield 20,000,000,000 barrels of crude oil, from which at least 2,000,000,000 barrels of gasoline can be extracted. Bituminous shale is a clayey, flaky rock that contains hydrocarbons or bituminous materials. Heat changes them into crude oil, gas and ammonia. The refined oil yields about ten per cent of gasoline, 35 per cent of kerosene and a considerable quantity of paraffin. In Scotland they have extracted oil from shale for more than fifty years, but the average quantity of oil recovered from a ton of shale is much less than the amount our own shales would yield. The retail price of gasoline is now higher than it has ever been before. According to government figures, the total yearly output is about 63,000,000 barrels, and, as it is estimated that only about 334,000,000 barrels can be produced from the present sources, there is little prospect that the price will come down.—Youth's Companion.

Where Artists Live.

Over on the West side, in Greenwich village, is Abingdon square, which in popular parlance is as big as "a minute." The square is at Eighth avenue and Hudson street, and in spite of its size, has a double record. It is listed not only as a park, but as a playground. In this quaint little corner of Greenwich village the memory is kept alive of Charlotte Warren, a New York girl, daughter of Sir Peter Warren, and Susanna de Lancey. Charlotte was the oldest daughter of this union, and married Willoughby, earl of Abingdon. The countess of Abingdon's name was also attached to the long-vanished Abingdon road, also called Love lane, which ran westward from Broadway, practically on the lines of the present Twenty-first street. Abingdon square is in the heart of that section of the city still known as Greenwich village. Nowadays it is very similar to the Latin quarter of Paris and is the living place of artists and writers.—New York Correspondent Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Ambitious.

"Fine," replied Mr. Chuggins. "I only wish it would draw the line at hills. Sometimes it wants to try a tree-box or a telegraph pole."

The Sport of It.

"Is there any gratification in being a favorite son?" asked the ordinary citizen.

"Yes," replied the politician; "about the same thing as being a fish, even if you don't catch anything."
